Truman Seizes Rails; Strike Called Off

Sunday Set For Army To Operate U. S. Roads

Unions Abandon Walkout Plan Half Hour After President's Order

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday ordered Government seizure and operation of the Nation's railroads, effective at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Within a half hour after release of the White House announcement, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors called off a strike of some 250,000 workers scheduled to start Monday morning.

It was to head off an actual work stoppage that Mr. Truman issued his executive order for taking over the railroads and for their operation by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., "in the name of the United States Government."

"I intend to take all steps necessary to assure the continued operations of the railroads," said Mr. Truman, indicating troops would be used if necessary.

As matters now stand, Army control will be pretty much a paper affair. Railroad executives will continue to handle actual operations; and, since union members are committed to stay on the job, soldiers will not be needed.

Union officials, who had been urging Government seizure to force a showdown in their long dispute with the carriers, hailed President Truman's order as a "tremendous victory for our people."

However, White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said the Government would not bargain with the unions for a special contract.

"The Government will not negotiate," Ross said. "The Government will not enter into a contract—that will be done by the unions with the carriers."

Developments came quickly yesterday afternoon. Secretary Ross issued Mr. Truman's executive order, together with a statement, at 3 o'clock, with the understanding it was to be released at 4 p. m.

A little before 4:30 p. m., a statement calling off the strike was issued by W. P. Kennedy, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and R. O. Hughes, president of the Order of Railway Conductors. It said:

"The men we represent will work for the Government gladly under Government operation of the railroads during this period of crisis until this dispute can be settled on its merits through mediation.

"The strike instructions issued August 23 are postponed indefinitely."

The unions, in urging the Presi-

Tavern Floor Is Dreamland For Father and 8 Children

Eight children said their prayers in the shadow of a musty bar in an Alexandria tavern early yesterday and then went to sleep on the floor to dream and hope of better days.

This was their only refuge.

Their father, Wilfred A. Corbin, 39, a medically discharged veteran of World War II and owner of the tavern could rightfully ask "How tough can it get?"

Corbin, his pregnant wife and their eight children were evicted from their three-bedroom home at 310 E. Glebe rd., Alexandria, on August 14 because they fell two months behind in rent.

The family had lived in the house for two years. Corbin said he had been able to keep up the rent of $105 a month but fell behind when Virginia rent controls were removed and his land-

House Votes 62½ Million Spanish Loan

Overrides Protest Of Administration, Clinches It Into Appropriation Bill

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday overrode Administration objections to a $62,500,000 loan to Spain and clinched it into a $36,153,490,425 general appropriation bill sped to the Senate.

A 200-million-dollar cut in Marshall Plan funds was also tied into the big omnibus measure but a last-minute appeal from the President averted a companion $11,900,000 slash in his Point Four program.

The House approved the full $26,900,000 voted earlier by the Senate for underdeveloped areas after Mr. Truman in a letter to Speaker Rayburn called the proposed cut a "tragic blunder."

The $62,500,000 mandatory loan to Franco's government was approved in two separate House standing votes, 165 to 90 and 164 to 80, with only a handful of House members supporting a demand for a roll-call record vote.

Not a single House leader took the floor against the loan during an hour's debate before the vote, but Virginia's Howard W. Smith badly jolted southern members supporting it by roundly denouncing the venture.

Smith, appearing in the rare role—for him—of Administration supporter, told colleagues it was "ludicrous" for the House to try to write foreign policy—that this was an executive function.

"You expect to get bases for this loan, but how do you know you will get them?" said Smith. "All dictators look alike to me."

Smith parted company with his frequent teammate, Georgia's Eugene Cox, to attack the loan. Cox took the floor for it.

ECA Would Handle Loan

The loan to Spain, cut down from 100 million dollars originally voted by the Senate, would require the Economic Cooperation Administrator to carry it out using Export-Import Bank credit.

Assumption is that ECA would try to negotiate a bilateral agreement with Franco to attempt to write at least some conditions on its use, compatible with conditions imposed on ECA funds.

Reports have been current that President Truman may veto the entire omnibus bill if the mandatory loan and other Senate-approved "restrictions" were sent to the White House.

Following a White House call yesterday, Norman Thomas, Socialist Party leader, said he urged such a veto on the President.

Thomas termed a loan to Franco a stupid thing, especially since ECA funds were being cut.

Stalled Reds Halt Attacks At All Points

U. N. Officers Say Pressure Is Ended In Taegu Sector For at Least 10 Days

Tokyo (Saturday), Aug. 26 (AP).—Rolled back at two points north of Taegu, the Korean Communists ceased all attacks Friday night and regrouped their battered forces for their next move.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead said today in a dispatch from the Taegu front that United Nations officers believe three Red divisions have been so severely smashed that another large scale attack there cannot be mounted for at least 10 days.

Simultaneous with a United States Eighth Army report of rebuffing the Communists everywhere on the ground, the Air Force announced a day's bag of 15 enemy tanks.

From every sector the report early today was "generally quiet."

Allies Make Mile Advance

The Eighth Army in a late morning communique disclosed that South Korean forces not only regained ground lost to 6000 Reds 24 miles northeast of Taegu but also punched out a mile gain 15 miles north of that advance supply base. That gain was in the Kumhwa area where two South Korean regiments killed 300 Communists and captured 42.

The sector north of Taegu is where shifting Red forces have concentrated their main strength.

In the other critical sector, on the south end of the 120-mile battle perimeter, planes which took off at dawn today said there was "no enemy activity." In that sector, only 35 air miles west of the lifeline port city of Pusan, the Reds had fought fiercely within hand grenade range Friday, probing for a possible breakthrough.

Tanks Knocked Out

American and Australian pilots listed five enemy tanks knocked out and four damaged in sectors defended by South Koreans north and east of Taegu. Far to the north at the Communist capital of Pyongyang, the planes shot up six more tanks. Four other "kills" were made at points around the battle perimeter, pilots said.

If confirmed, these would amount to serious losses for the Reds. Communist commanders have been using armor sparingly in even the heaviest ground fighting recently. In some sectors, the tanks were dug in and used for artillery.

Due west of Taegu, in the sector defended by the First Cavalry Division, Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth said heavy artillery Friday night bombarded a Red tank concentration. This group of armor was several miles west of the Naktong River. During intervals in the firing, patrols went across the river but failed to locate the forces.

Also late Friday, the Eighth Army said a small enemy force behind the South Korean First Division was blasted out of its

120 Tanks for the Enemy

Chinese Reds Move 2 Armies Near Korea, Pentagon Hears

By The Associated Press

Two Chinese Communist armies have been massed along the Korean border and 120 mammoth tanks have been sent to the North Koreans from the Russian-controlled port of Dairen, the U. S. Army revealed yesterday.

The movement of the heavy tanks raised new threats for U. N. forces in Korea—if the tanks can be brought into action, which some U. S. experts strongly doubt.

A defense spokesman credited both reports to official U. S. sources. They were made public a few hours after Army Chief of Staff J. Lawton Collins returned from conferences in Tokyo with General MacArthur. Army General Staff offices evidenced an unusual flurry of activity after Collins returned.

Other reports received through official United States channels said the Chinese Communist Party has commandeered all shipping and is mobilizing Chinese laborers to move war supplies across the border into Korea.

Main concentrations of Chinese Red manpower and Communist war equipment were reported around Antung, big industrial center and transportation hub near the mouth of Yalu River. This river not only forms the boundary between Manchuria and Korea for several hundred miles but also supplies a usable artery for the movement of equipment from northern Manchuria.

Other Pentagon officials said the presence of heavy Russian tanks in North Korea has been known for some days. They emphasized that none of these tanks, believed to be the Josef Stalin III type, had been able to get into action.

The continuous American bombing of railroads, roads and bridges was credited with stopping their movement.

Some suggested that the Chinese troops have been moved to the Korean border as a precautionary measure in the event United Nations forces decide to drive past the thirty-eighth parallel.

The exact size of a Chinese Communist army is not known, but Pentagon officers estimated that two armies would probably number between 160,000 and 200,000 men.

Slash Order Reversed

House Votes $290,000 Fund For District Civilian Defense

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The House last night boosted the ante for Washington civilian defense from $30,000 to the $290,000 urged by the District Commissioners.

The vote was 99 to 75. The action still is subject to final House passage of the supplemental appropriations bill, probably today.

The money increase was a victory for a scrappy little task force of House District Committee members, with some other allies, over the powerful leadership of the House Appropriations Committee.

Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.) made the motion that boosted the civilian defense fund back to the higher figure.

Reversal of Order

Teague was acting as chairman of an emergency subcommittee appointed in a morning executive session of the House District Committee to carry to the floor the fight to reverse the civilian defense funds slash ordered the day before by the House Appropriations Committee.

Working with Teague in a 25-minute debate were Representatives James C. Davis (D., Ga.), Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), and John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.), all of the House District Committee.

They were backed by Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.), Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) and others.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee forced three votes in an effort to defeat Teague's move. He lost all three.

Calls For Standing Vote

The first was a voice vote in which a roar of support went up for Teague. It was met by a ripple of noes against him. Cannon then called for a standing vote. Teague won, 94-96. Cannon finally asked for tellers, a method of voting in which the members walk up the middle aisle of the House to be counted. This went to Teague 99-75, shortly before 7 p. m.

In the debate Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), and Lowell Stockman (R., Oreg.), chairman and ranking minority member, respectively, of the appropriations subcommittee on District money, strongly defended the reduction in funds to $30,000. They said that amount would be sufficient for planning.

Representative Teague told the House he had been "shocked to learn" about the civilian defense cut. He said he called Gen. Lucius

War Will Cost 10 Billion More In Few Months

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Chairman George Mahon (D., Tex.) of the House Military Appropriations subcommittee said last night that another supplemental defense budget totaling about ten billion dollars will be submitted to Congress within the next several months.

He made the statement on the House floor in explaining the 16.7 billion emergency spending bill—most of which is for fighting communism in Korea and throughout the world.

Mahon declared the 11.6 billions carried in the bill for the armed forces, plus the 13.3 billions in the regular money bill finally approved by the House earlier in the day, "is not adequate to meet the requirements already in sight."

Budget estimates for the four National Guard divisions being called into service, plus a "large increment of Marines" and "many" other projects now are being prepared at the Pentagon, he said.

Telling the House that the total over-all defense costs projected to date—including atomic energy, foreign aid, etc., but not the extra 10 billions for the armed forces—aggregate 36 billions, Mahon pointed out this almost equals the estimated 1951 Federal revenue of 37.3.

The House took up the $16,711,084,479 supplemental appropriation bill late in the day but adjourned until today before voting on any provisions.

The measure, with the new supplemental estimates now under preparation, said Mahon, call for 1,000,000 men to be in the Army by next June 30, plus 750,000 in the Navy—including 165,000 Marines—and 560,000 in the Air Force. That's a total of 2,310,000 fighting men.

Craft Hits Freighter In Fog Off West Coast

Men Struggle In Heavy Seas; 12 Bodies Found, Vessel Under Test

BULLETIN

San Francisco, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—The Navy announced at 10:52 p. m. (Pacific Daylight Time) that the death toll of the hospital ship Benevolence disaster stood at 12, including a navy nurse. An estimated 545 persons were aboard the Navy announced officially.

San Francisco, Aug. 25 (AP). A military hospital ship collided with a freighter in a dense fog and sank four miles off San Francisco late today.

An undetermined number of persons was killed and injured.

The hospital ship Benevolence plunged to the bottom shortly after she crashed with the outbound freighter Mary Luckenbach.

At least 5 were known dead and 4 hurt seriously. A fishing boat brought them and 17 uninjured men to San Francisco. Rescue vessels continued their efforts to save men struggling in the rough waters four miles off the Gate.

At Fort Mason and Fort Point, where survivors were being brought ashore, it was figured that around 479 had been accounted for.

An estimated 50 survivors were landed by a Coast Guard tug at 8:05 p. m. The majority appeared to be suffering from exposure.

Survivors said the crash occurred about 5:55 p. m. (Pacific daylight time) and the Benevolence sank in about 20 or 30 minutes.

Newton Geran, 28, Baton Rouge, La., sailor aboard the Benevolence, said it seemed as though the Benevolence had been hit almost directly amidships.

"The fog was pea soup thick, you couldn't see a thing at all," said William Oxford, 20, of Waycross, Ga. "We just jumped into the water and were picked up by the tug which came along and heard our yells."

Visibility Zero

Although reports to the Navy and Coast Guard said the Benevolence was sunk, a tug advised that she had seen the hospital ship awash, but still afloat about half a mile east of the Mary Luckenbach.

The Coast Guard, checking this report, asked all vessels in the area to check on the position given. The fog was so thick visibility was zero. Planes could see nothing and, from vessels, it was impossible to see more than a few feet.

The collision happened during the season when the thick white fog streams into the Golden Gate as though through a funnel.

Returning From Trial Run

Circumstances of the disaster and rescue attempts were so confused that, although approximately a score of rescue vessels were in the area, even the coast guard could give no accurate picture.

The Mary Luckenbach, outbound with a general cargo consigned to the east coast, smashed her bow in colliding with the hospital ship, which was returning from a trial run before being sent to the Far East war zone.

The Luckenbach, still afloat and apparently in no danger of sinking, carried a crew of 49, according to Coast Guard information.

Provincial Capital In Philippines Set Afire by Huks

Manila, Philippines, Saturday, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—A big force of Communist-led Huk rebels set fire to the provincial capital of Tarlac, 60 miles north of Manila, last night, and killed 10 constabulary soldiers, an official military report said today. Four constabulary men were wounded.

Heavy fighting is now in progress and fires were still burning at 1 a. m. when the army disclosed the Huk attack.

The rebels raided Tarlac, capital of Tarlac province, and attacked the constabulary camp about 1500 feet outside it. It was believed there were considerable more casualties than those reported officially.

Wages Raised $25,000,000 By Chrysler

Unexpected Boost Will Add at Least 10c an Hour to Pay

Detroit, Aug. 25 (AP).—Chrysler Corp.'s 120,000 employes got a 25 million dollar a year windfall today in the form of a totally unexpected pay boost of at least 10 cents an hour.

Some will get more under an informal agreement between the company and the CIO United Auto Workers—the first of its kind ever reached in the auto industry.

Almost immediately, a flat 10-cent raise will go to Chrysler's 93,000 production workers. Skilled tool, die, maintenance and power house employes—7000 of them—will get an additional five cents. Some 20,000 salaried workers will receive seven percent raises with a minimum of $17.50 a month.

Chrysler said the program would cost it at least 25 million dollars a year.

A spokesman said, however, no car price increases were contemplated. But the move seemed destined to have important effects elsewhere in the industry and possibly on the American economy.

The agreement, not even put into writing, is over and above the three-year Chrysler-UAW contract signed last May 4 after a bitter 100-day strike.

It seemingly marked one of the most sudden changes in labor-management relations the industry ever has seen. Company and union negotiators haggled for weeks over minute details of the contract before coming to terms. After the strike was settled, they even refused to pose together for photographers.

Shimon to Tell 'Tap' Story at Public Hearing

Officer's Former Aides Testify to Listening in On Fulton and Monroe

A Senate Committee yesterday ordered Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon to tell the story of his wire tapping activities for the first time in public at 10 a. m. Monday.

The order for the Monday hearing was issued by Senator Claude Pepper, (D., Fla.).

The hearing will be in room F-82 in the Senate wing of the Capitol. Quizzing of Shimon to date has been in closed hearings.

Two policemen who formerly were aides of Shimon yesterday told the Pepper committee about tapping the wires of Attorney Hugh Fulton, one-time counsel for the Senate War Investigating Committee, when it was headed by President Truman, and the wires of John P. Monroe, who made Washington headlines as proprietor of "the Big Red House on R st."

The witnesses were Detective Sergt George H. Robison, jr., who is now assigned to the sex squad, and Precinct Detective Thomas L. Herlihy of the special investigations squad. They testified in the Pepper committee's second public hearing in the Senate caucus room.

Robison told about the tapping of Fulton's phones. He said it was done at the Occidental Hotel, where Fulton still has offices, in late May or early June, 1947. He said Shimon took him to the hotel room and attached the listening device. He said the Fulton phones were tapped for a period of two or three weeks.

Committee Counsel Gehard P. van Arkel said that Robison's testimony appeared to conflict with what Shimon has told the com-

Kept 4 Servants on $65 Salary

$8.18 Slip Trips Bookkeeper Accused of Taking Thousands

A touch of irony was added yesterday to the strange story of the $65-a-week bookkeeper who rented a $250-a-month Belle Haven home, had four servants, drove a Cadillac and lost a small fortune on the horses.

It was an error in addition of $8.18—an "honest" mistake—which finally tripped up Richard G. Richardson, 27, high-living bookkeeper of the International Association of Machinists, according to a spokesman for the union.

Police say Richardson had perfected a neat trick with an adding machine as he worked out the office payroll which enabled him to pocket between $90,000 and $100,000 of union funds over the past 18 months.

But, said the union spokesman, Richardson made a mistake of $8.18 last Wednesday as he prepared the payroll figure on the adding machine. Another bookkeeper in the office caught the mistake, checked and found $2700 missing and unaccounted for. Richardson was arrested the following day.

The system had gone undetected in two audits of the union's books. Briefly, according to a union spokesman, this is the way the system worked:

Richardson was assigned to draw up the weekly office payroll. This was done on an adding machine. When he had listed all the salaries on the adding-machine tape, he would remove the tape and register additional items on the machine.

Then he would replace the tape and hit the total key. Thus, the Fourth Area Soldier Killed

Mother Buying Combat Knives For GI Son Learns of His Death

An Arlington, Va., mother, shopping for combat knives for her only son, was officially notified of his death on a Korean battlefield.

The War Department message caught up with Mrs. Lucille V. Millspaugh of 1740 Oak st., Monday, as she walked out of a Chicago hotel, she told The Washington Post yesterday.

"The Secretary of the Army has asked me to express his deep regret that your son, Pfc. Millspaugh, Judson L., jr., was killed in action in Korea on July 28," the message read.

She was going out, she said, to buy four hunting knives her son had asked for in his first and only letter to her from Korea. The letter told her that he was "in the fighting area" and wanted the knives for himself and three buddies.

"Oh, why did they have to tell me this way?" the mother cried. "Couldn't they have waited till I got back home?"

The dead soldier, called "Jim" by his parents and friends, is the 20-year-old namesake son of a Navy doctor, Commander Millspaugh of the Portsmouth, Va., Naval Hospital.

Mrs. Millspaugh said she was visiting relatives in Denver, Colo., and had stopped off in Chicago to visit her doctor and see some friends.

"Jim," who attended both the Arthur F. Murray and Washington and Lee Schools in Arlington, was born in the Little Rock, Ark., hospital, where his father was in interne service, his mother said. He was in his fourth year at Massanutten Military Academy, Woodstock, Va., when he enlisted in the Army two years ago, she said.

The grieving mother said her son was a member of reconnaissance (scouting) company of an infantry division in Korea action. She found out yesterday, she said, that he was killed near Sangju, about 20 miles northwest of Waegwan, now deep in Red-held territory.

"Jim" didn't tell her much in his letter from Korea, she said. He asked for the knives, and mentioned that the South Koreans were "good people" and that the food was "good." He explained that he was in combat and couldn't write as much as he wanted to, she said.

The mother said she has asked the Army to bring her boy back for burial in Arlington Cemetery.

His death brought to four the number of Washington area men killed in Korea. Twelve others have been reported as missing, and 19 others from the area have been reported wounded there.

'Ridiculous,' Says Austin

U. S. Invites U. N. Investigation Of Reds' Formosa Charges

Lake Success, Aug. 25 (AP).—The United States said today it would welcome a full United Nations inquiry, either here or on the spot, into Chinese Communist charges of American aggression in Formosa.

Chief U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin made it clear, however, that the United States would fight any attempts to sidetrack discussion of the Korean conflict to take up the Formosa problem.

In a letter to Secretary-General Trygve Lie, Austin labelled as "ridiculous falsehoods" the aggression charges made yesterday in a cable from Chou En-lai, Foreign Minister of the Peiping regime.

Austin denied the United States had any designs against Chinese territory and said the only reason the U. S. Seventh Fleet was sent to patrol the Strait of Formosa was to prevent further fighting between the Communists and Nationalists.

The text of the Austin letter was circulated to Security Council members just before the Council met under the presidency of Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik for a long French translation of speeches delivered Tuesday by Austin, Malik and Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb. The translations required an hour and 33 minutes.

Malik then made what he called a "corrective" speech answering the Tuesday attacks by Austin and Jebb. His speech was much milder than usual. He repeated his previous charges that the United States was the aggressor in Korea and

C Company Finds High Living 'Rough'

By Homer Bigart

With U. S. Troops in Korea, Aug. 25 (NYHT).—For the past eight days Charlie Company of the Twenty-seventh Regiment combat team has been perched on a scrubby summit nearly 1000 feet above the main road leading into Taegu from the north.

From this strategic height Capt. Alfred S. Burnett of Knoxville, Tenn., and his hawk-eyed artillery observer, Lieut. Glen Record of Solomon, Mo., have been calling strikes on enemy armor trying to storm the mountain pass that is the real key to Taegu.

Last night Charlie Company had to beat off another attack by Red infantry who assaulted the hill "screaming like a bunch of girls at a basketball game," as Burnett described it.

Road Strewn With Debris

This morning, the valley road and the narrow plain seemed lifeless. Directly below for a distance of a mile the road was strewn with the accumulated debris of a week's fighting. There were the huge corpses of 10 Russian-made tanks, one burned and blackened, another with its turret blown off by an internal explosion set off by a direct hit from a white phosphorous shell.

Among these dead beetles lay one American tank which by a sinister stroke of fortune had run over one of our own mines. Tilted crazily in ditches were six light armored Russian-made vehicles, most of them mounting high velocity guns. Two smashed anti-tank guns and seven wrecked trucks completed the junk yard.

OP Is Ideal One

It was one of those ideal observation posts that usually happen only to the enemy. Directly in the line of vision was a road junction vital to the Reds and usually within their jurisdiction. But scores of American guns were zeroed in on the junction now—and the enemy no longer attempted to run his vehicles past this intersection and down the mile long straightaway the Americans called "the Bowling Alley."

The observation post was also a window on a wide expanse of territory behind enemy lines. We could observe his lateral supply routes — winding trails that branched from the valleys along the ascending staircases of rice paddies. Once we saw six Korean women hauling ammunition along a trail to Red positions in the hills.

Occasionally small groups of the enemy, never more than four in a group, would scurry across the naked, shell-pocked floor of the valley. We had a moment of exhilaration when two Red soldiers tarried beneath a tree long enough for Lieutenant Record to lay in a few shells. It was a properly savage thrill to see the Reds pause in the shade and light their cigarettes and to know that death-dealing shells would descend on them momentarily. But the soldiers were to live. The shells fell short and splattered in a rice field.

Red Rescue of Gun Fails

Just after noon we had some excitement at close range. Three hundred yards to our left across a deep ravine was a razorback ridge somewhat higher than the observation post. During the night attack the enemy had succeeded in mounting a machine-gun on the spiny crest but the nest was knocked out quickly and the gun abandoned.

Suddenly as we sat watching the valley, Sergt. Corbin H. Bridges, of Fort Smith, Ark., who had been sweeping the ridge with his field glasses, gave a yell. Five or six North Korean soldiers were tumbling over the skyline in a frantic attempt to salvage the gun. Captain Burnett's men reacted swiftly with rifle and machine-gun fire. But the telling blow was struck by the mortar section.

Sergt. Dennis Baker, of Chambersburg, Pa., placed a mortar shell smack in the center of the enemy group. When the smoke cleared, one of the Reds lay lifeless on the froward slope. Two others, obviously wounded, were crawling over the skyline and the rest had disappeared. The machine-gun had not been moved.

We had grandstand seats for an attack launched by a small force of Americns and South Koreans down the bowling alley below us. Two American platoons were to secure the village of Chongpyong on our right and slightly to the rear and allow a South Korean force to pass through them and occupy two hill masses immediately in front of us.

Supported by two tanks, the Americans reached the village without incident. But the South Koreans, moving in close single file on either side of the road, offered too attractive a target.

The enemy waited until the South Koreans had bunched together in a dry stream bed, then let loose with a mortar and a high-velocity gun. The effect was terrific. In a few minutes the Koreans were thoroughly disorganized and running to the rear.

Later we learned their commander and their second ranking officer had been killed by one shell burst. The Americans were also obliged to fall back.

The attack had failed and again Burnett's men were stuck far out ahead of the rest of the Allied force.

"The attack was well planned, but the Koreans were 30 minutes to an hour late coming up," commented Capt. Martin L. Merchant of Ilion, N. Y., whose Fox Company contributed a platoon to the attack.

North Koreans Who Retreat Ordered Shot

Masan Front, Korea, Aug. 25 (AP). The North Korean army has ordered death by shooting for any soldier who retreats.

A copy of a Communist general order seized today says:

"1. Do not give ground.

"2. Anyone withdrawing will be shot."

United Nations psychological warfare forces immediately stepped up their campaign promising safe conduct to any Red soldier who surrenders.

North Koreans have been captured with increasing ease recently. Now that certain death awaits them if they retreat, American combat officers said the Communists may come over to U. N. lines in large numbers.

Friday afternoon 45,000 red-and-white leaflets bearing U. N. insignia were dropped on Red positions on the southern front west of Masan. Over General MacArthur's signature, they ordered American soldiers to give humane treatment to any North Korean coming in with a leaflet.

Four hundred North Koreans waved a white flag of surrender today when caught in the open. Lieut. Col. Bernard Teters of Park Falls, Wis., ordered his men to hold fire.

Suddenly the Reds began running back to their own lines, still under the white flag. American machineguns and artillery opened up on them.

Total—367.

A late report said there were 280 survivors, most of them pulled out of the water, on their way back to Fort Mason Army Base.

The last message heard from the Benevolence was "am 4 miles off Golden Gate Bridge. Need emergency assistance."

The Navy tug Arequipa radioed: "We are in midst of debris. It is floating with green-striped life preservers. We are 2 miles west of Point Lobos. No survivors sighted as yet."

Other rescue vessels reported rescuing many survivors.

The perilous waters off the Golden Gate, obscured by a very dense fog which prevented aircraft from even seeing the sea, were rough in the collision area. Moderate sweels added to the hazard as night fell.

There were no patients aboard the Benevolence, which was recommissioned recently from the surplus fleet at Mare Island.

Army Tug First at Scene

At least 15 Coast Guard vessels were sent out to aid in rescue work. The first craft to reach the scene was an Army tug. It radioed it was busy pulling men out of the water.

The Coast Guard said its cutters were cruising around in the thick fog, picking up struggling men. The waters off the Gate are extremely rough and perilous, making it difficult for even a good swimmer to survive long in them.

The Mary Luckenbach, captained by L. C. Smith, is a C-2 type vessel.

With a capacity of 802 patients, the Benevolence was built in 1944 by the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. of Chester, Pa. An 11,000-ton vessel, she is 522 feet in length and 71 feet in width.

Reds Repulsed at All Points

PRESSURE LIFTED—North Korean attacks were halted early today after Allied forces had thrown back enemy thusts on all fronts. Most serious threats (A) north of Taegu were ended, United Nations officers said, as the Reds withdrew three badly mauled divisions for regrouping. The southern front (B) around Tundok and Chungam was quiet after several North Korean attacks failed. On the east coast near Pohang (C) a two-pronged South Korean drive began moving again after meeting heavy enemy resistance in its early stages hideout in a walled village. The remnants appeared to be trying to get back to their lines.

This force originally totaled a thousand or more when it infiltrated through a gap in the lines north of Taegu but the bulk of it was wiped out.

The Reds also were forced to break off their pressure at both ends of the battle perimeter. On the south end, where Communist concentrations exceeded two divisions, the United States Twenty-fifth Division held firmly to high ground defending Pusan.

At the eastern anchor, north of the port city of Pohang, the United States Eighth Army said today the South Korean Capital Division has "stabilized its lines north of Kigye after yesterday's withdrawal and the ROK (Republic of Korea) Third Division gained 600 yards." Kigye is 8 miles northwest of Pohang.

As 1500 British soldiers sailed from Hongkong, it was disclosed in London that an advance unit of 10 officers left for Korea to arrange for their arrival.

The United States Second Division was reported in action as a unit on the Naktong River line—the central front southwest of Taegu—for the first time. That line was relatively quiet. Elements of the division had been fighting separately on scattered fronts.

Fighting Heavy in South

Inconclusive fighting raged on the extreme southern front between Chinju and the port of Masan, 27 air miles west of the main American supply port of Pusan.

That southern front blazed Friday with tank and infantry fighting so close that Negro troops of the United States 24th Regiment were able to use hand-grenades.

The main attack in the south, near Tundok, was repulsed. A drive by a smaller force of Reds in the hills west of Masan was stalled late Friday by artillery and mortar fire from the 35th Regiment of the United States 25th Division.

The badly mauled North Korean Sixth Division around Chinju, 55 air miles west of Pusan, was reported to have received two reinforcing regiments.

The first major drive for Pusan began August 1 and was smashed August 13 by the Twenty-fifth Division and the United States First Marine Brigade.

Stop Naming Units

General MacArthur's release early Saturday said Korean Republican forces north of Taegu continued to hack away at infiltrating Reds and drove about 150 of them into a walled city 9 miles north of Taegu. The summary did not name the city.

The release omitted identifications of individual units. It was the start of a new policy. Briefing officers said they did not know why.

Officers at headquarters were unable to say whether releases of Eighth Army headquarters in Korea would continue to identify units. Nor could it be learned whether war correspondents in the field also would be so restricted.

The buildup of American manpower and supplies continued to the extent that it appears amazing to those who recall the tragic early days of the 2-month-old war, when everything was in the line. Now responsible United States officers, AP Correspondent Tom Lambert said, think the Allies may suffer further setbacks but very few believe the Reds can shove the defenders off the peninsula.

In the early days that prospect was uppermost in most minds.

"It was much too early even to predict a strong Allied offensive, but a definite note of optimism was becoming increasingly evident.

Lambert and Whitehead, who have been with United States and South Korean forces since the dark early days, both took the occasion of the start of the third month of the conflict to report the Americans now had more than just hope for the future.

The Reds may force the defense to push back again, Whitehead wrote, but, "in retrospect the past three weeks may be looked upon as the real turning point of the Korean war—the days when the Communists lost any chance they had to put the Moscow straitjacket on South Korea."

The word that cheered the most cautious onlookers was that the front had been stabilized and the Communists had been forced time and time again to search the chinks in the wall after being rebuffed in blood.

29 British Commonwealth Ships in Korean Action

London, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—The Admiralty announced today that 29 British Commonwealth warships are engaged in operations in Korean waters.

The announcement said that of the 10,000 officers and men of the Commonwealth Navy in the Far East, 7000 were engaged in the Korea campaign.

The Admiralty said the Commonwealth force had carried out 38 bombardments of troop concentrations, factories, bridges, supply dumps and barracks in support of ground forces in Korea. The force also covered amphibious landings.

U. C. Regents Vote To Fire 32 if They Don't Sign Oath

Berkeley, Calif., Aug. 25 (AP).—University of California regents voted 12 to 10 today to discharge 32 faculty members unless they sign a special non-Communist statement within 10 days.

The vote reverses the regents' action of a month ago. Then they balloted 10 to 9 to retain the nonsigners—all of whom had been cleared by a screening committee and declared loyal.

The action also was contrary to the advice of University President Robert Gordon Sproul, who recommended that 40 nonsigning faculty members be given renewals of their contracts.

U. N. 'Police' Plan Backed By 31 on Hill

A bipartisan group of 16 Senators and 15 House members urged yesterday the establishment of a United Nations police force, made up of volunteers from small nations, to aid in combating aggression.

As proposed by the sponsors of a resolution, the force would operate under an arrangement designed to prevent a Soviet veto of action to quell aggression.

The plan was outlined by Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.), who was named by President Truman Thursday as a United States delegate to the United Nations Assembly meeting next month.

Sparkman declared there are "hundreds of thousands of volunteers throughout the world who want to join in the fight against the Communist aggressors in Korea and elsewhere." He said he didn't know whether it would be possible to get around a Soviet veto of the proposal but "we must try."

Led by 9-Member Authority

The proposed police force would consist of land, sea and air forces, directed by a nine-member "Police Authority"—three from the United States, three from the British Commonwealth and France and three collectively elected by the smaller member states. Its decisions would be by simple majority vote.

As the sponsors explained it, the Security Council could block decisions of the authority only by affirmative action. Thus the United States would be in a position to veto any attempt in the Council to call off the police force.

The resolution would leave the door open to Russian membership, provided she met certain conditions such as accepting international control of atomic energy and agreed to a limitation on and inspection of armaments.

In addition to Sparkman, Senators sponsoring the resolution are: Aiken (R., Vt.), Cain (R., Wash.), Capehart (R., Ind.), Douglas (D., Ill.), Flanders (R. Vt.), Gillette (D., Iowa), Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Graham (D., N. C.), Hill (D, Ala.), Humphrey (D., Minn.), Hoey (D., N. C.), Mundt (R., S Dak.), O'Conor (D., Md.), Margaret Chase (R., Me.) and Stennis (D., Miss.).

Two resolutions were drafted in the House. One, by Representative Judd (R., Minn.), is identical with the Senate resolution. The other, prepared by Representative Hays (D., Ark.), is a slight modification.

House sponsors, in addition to Judd and Hays, were listed as:

70 B-29s Hit Port Cities In N. Korea

Tokyo, Aug. 25 (U.P.). — More than 70 United States Air Force B-29 Superfortresses smashed North Korean targets with about 600 tons of bombs today.

Bombing by radar, they hit the east coast ports of Wonsan and Konan, while fighters attacked airfields at Wonsan and the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

The big Bogun chemical plant at Wonsan, 80 miles north of the 38th Parallel, was one of the Superfort targets.

Results of the strikes at Wonsan and Konan, 45 miles north, were not observed, because of cloudy weather.

A flight of four F-51 Mustang fighter-bombers almost completely destroyed two Communist trains, one loaded with tanks, 15 miles east of Pyongyang, the Fifth Air Force said.

The Air Force reported the Reds are using dummy Yak fighters to draw American fighter attacks to their fields. Pilots returning from attacks on Sinmat, 25 miles east of Seoul, said they found 10 such dummy planes parked on the strip there today.

Reds Admit Damage To Rail Stations, Bridges

Tokyo (Saturday), Aug. 26 (U.P.). The North Korean radio at Pyongyang admitted in a broadcast today that the United States Air Force has destroyed many Communist railroad stations and bridges.

The broadcast, monitored here, said the damage was the result of "indiscriminate bombings."

Congress Is Asked To Draft Doctors

'Best Outfit'

D. C. Girl, 18, Finally Gets Into Marines

The Washington Post

ROSEMARY FRANCES PRICCI
. . . teenage Marine

Eighteen-year-old Rosemary Pricci, 5521 Colorado ave. nw., who has been trying to join the Marines for more than two months, finally succeeded yesterday when the age-limit was lowered from 20 to 18.

The good looking, dark-haired Miss Pricci has been assigned to the Fifth Marine Corps Reserve District and will be called to active duty in November.

She said that although she had a distant relative in the Marines, her real reason for joining was to be in "the best outfit."

The Navy, meanwhile, recruited two brothers, Robert B. and Walter S. Ringer, 505 61st ave., Capital Heights, Md.

The brothers said they joined up because they have two brothers, Edward and Donald, already in the Navy.

Robert and Walter "robbed" the Navy of a baseball team, members of which promised to enlist with the brothers if they would wait till the end of the baseball season. Robert was a southpaw pitcher, and Walter played centerfield for the Haney's Bar Ball team in Morningside, Md.

The Navy Recruiting Office, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., yesterday reported two reenlistments, 12 enlistments, and 11 applications for enlistment, seven of which were accepted.

The Marine Corps Recruiting Office, also at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., had eight applicants and one enlistment yesterday.

Arlington Farms gave preinduction physicals to 114 men, all between 22 and 25 years old. The Arlington Draft Board reported 77 men will be called for physical examinations Sept. 5. Officials said some 21-year-olds might be called at that time.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson asked Congress yesterday for authority to draft doctors, dentists and other scientific and professional men up to age 45.

First to be called would be 5000 young doctors who escaped military service after being educated at Government expense during World War II.

The language of the bill empowers President Truman to order special registration and induction of men in any "needed professional, technical, scientific, specialist and other occupational categories."

Inductions to Rise

Johnson submitted the bill, which Congress had promised sympathetic reception, as Army sources predicted future draft calls in the 19-through-25 youth group will be "much larger" than the 50,000-a-month quotas for September and October. It was said that inductions may go as high as 100,000 men a month.

Johnson asked early action on the doctor draft to forestall the necessity for calling up "substantial numbers" of reserve medical officers who, he said, served long and loyally in the last war.

He said the legislation has the full backing of President Truman.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said his House Armed Services Committee will begin public hearings on the bill Monday. He hinted in a House speech Thursday his committee favors the measure because the Government-trained doctors and dentists have ignored pleas for volunteers.

Calls for 4 Priorities

The bill affects doctors and other specialists "who have not yet reached the age of 45." They would serve up to 21 months, the same period prescribed for drafttees in the 19-through-25 bracket.

The bill sets up four priorities for inductions. Liable for call in the first group are those who received medical or dental training at Government expense, but who served less than 90 days on active duty. In the same group are men deferred from the draft during World War II to take medical or dental training at their own expense.

The second group would be men trained during World War II who served on active duty for more than 90 days but less than 21 months.

Third would be other doctors and dentists who have had no military service but are physically qualified.

Last to be called would be men who have served more than 21 months. They would be called in order of the length of past service, with those with the least service called first.

McCloy Blasts 'Peace Appeal' As Hypocritical

Frankfurt, Aug. 25 (U.P.).— U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy denounced the Stockholm "peace appeal" today as hypocritical and said the sole aggressive force in the world is Russia.

McCloy made the statement in rejecting an invitation from 11 Soviet Zone German youth to sign the petition.

"I cannot understand," McCloy wrote in reply, "how 11 young people such as I assume you to be can indulge in the hypocrisy of an appeal for peace in the face of the cold aggression and slavery perpetrated against those all about you and still call yourselves 'free Genman youth'."

McCloy said he found in the Stockholm resolution "important glaring omissions . . . about which you and many others appear to have been kept completely in the dark."

Aberdeen to Get Russian-Made Armored Jeep

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 25 (U.P.).— A Russian-manufactured armored jeep captured in Korea was crated at the Oakland Naval Supply Depot today for shipment to the Army's proving ground at Aberdeen, Md.

The vehicle, believed to be the first of its kind to arrive in this country, was described as closely resembling an American jeep except that it is enclosed in quarter-inch armor plate.

Supply depot officials said the jeep's dashboard instruments were lettered in Russian. The jeep contains two seats, one for the driver and the other for a turret gunner to man a .50-caliber machine gun. The only other weapon in the vehicle was a "cheaply-made" 30-caliber submachine gun.

The jeep has a four-wheel drive and is powered by a four-cylinder engine.

Battered Body Of Woman Found, Husband Quizzed

New York, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—The nude body of a red-haired woman, her head battered and her face covered with blood, was found in the bushes of a lovers' lane alongside Aqueduct Race Track today. Her husband was held for questioning.

James Maguire, 35, a truck driver, identified the body as that of his wife, Teresa, 34, after it was found by two race track caretakers this morning.

Police said Maguire gave no explanation for his failure to report his wife's disappearance. A yellow skirt, red blouse, red panties and other underclothing were thrown on top of the body. Mrs. Maguire had not been criminally assaulted, police said, but there was evidence of a terrific struggle.

Excess Profits Tax Bill Stirs Senate Row

By The Associated Press

Senator George (D., Ga.) declared yesterday that to impose an 85 percent excess profits tax on corporations, without controlling prices and wages, would send the country into a whirl of inflation.

In a hot Senate debate, backers of the profits levy shouted back that it would curb, not promote, inflation and would crack down on "profiteers."

The Government, they said, should take a big chunk of profits in excess of "normal." Under their proposal a concern would not have to pay any excess profits tax on a sum equal to 80 percent of its average profits in the years 1946 through 1949, plus $10,000. But profits above this would be taxed at 85 percent.

George told Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) the super tax on profits he proposed would not yield the Treasury a dollar of extra income this year. Instead, he said, it would set off an orgy of waste, with corporations spending money freely to avoid handing it over to the Treasury.

As chairman of the tax-framing Finance Committee, George pleaded with the Senate to delay action on such a profits tax, promising that a bill will be considered later—after study—to make such a levy applicable January 1, 1951.

O'Mahoney wants to make the tax effective as of July 1, 1950.

The battle began when O'Mahoney and Senator Connally (D., Tex.) formally offered their excess profits tax proposals as an amendment to the $4,508,000,000 tax boosting bill requested by President Truman.

If the amendment is successful, George said, there may be no tax bill at all this year.

O'Mahoney estimated that the proposed tax would yield about three billion dollars a year at the present level of corporation profits, and $5,500,000,000 if these profits reach 40 billion dollars. He estimated the present rate of profits at about 34 billion dollars.

He told the Senators they could not afford to be "tender with profits while we are drastic with men." The levy is needed, he said, to "prevent profiteers from raising prices for the government and for the people."

Cut Ordered In Rubber Use

The Commerce Department yesterday ordered a 10 percent cut on use of rubber—both natural and synthetic—for civilian goods the rest of this year.

The order aims to reduce consumption from 100,000 tons a month to about 90,000 tons.

They said the action was taken "to provide for a proper apportionment of rubber between Government and civilian needs." Main Government needs are for military use and emergency stockpiling.

The order is "constructive and should make available rubber supplies adequate to provide for military and all essential civilian needs," John L. Collyer, president of B. F. Goodrich Co. and special director of rubber programs for the War Production Board during World War II, said.

"In the meantime, if we are to have enough rubber for any eventuality, it is urgent that the inactive plants constituting our rubber insurance policy be put into commission as rapidly as possible."

Post-Korean Food Price Boom Appears to Be Leveling Off

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The boom in food prices that came with the outbreak of fighting in Korea has started to taper off, the Bureau of Labor Statistics indicated yesterday.

From July 31 to August 15 retail food prices in Washington declined slightly, BLS reported. Its estimate is based on a special survey of 25 foods.

Lower prices for fresh fruits and vegetables in the Nation's Capital more than offset higher prices for most other foods, the survey revealed. From July 31 to August 15 most meat prices declined, against the seasonal trend, although bacon went up one percent.

The bureau estimated that the retail food price index for 56 large cities on August 15 was 209—based on the average for 1935-39 as 100. That index was 0.3 percent below July 31 and 0.5 percent below July 15. The 1949 Index was about two percent above June 15, before the Korean fighting, and about 3.5 percent below the record high of July, 1948.

While BLS was making its special report for this month, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics was reporting that the farmer did not profit by the rise in food prices before June 15.

The BAE Market Basket Report showed that the cost of feeding an average family of three persons in June reached the highest price since June a year ago. But a greater increase — one of around three percent — is predicted by BAE for July, based on a recent report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The cost of feeding a family of three persons in June was at the rate of $653 a year, or $54.41 for the month. The rate has been going up steadily since February, when the cost for 12 months was only $611.

However, the farmer, who last February was getting 48 cents out of each dollar spent for food, in June got only 46 cents. From 1943 to 1948 the farmer got from 51 to 54 cents out of each retail food dollar.

In other words, out of the $653 a family of three was spending for food the farmer was getting $302. The remaining $351 was going for transportation, packing, handling, wholesaling and retailing charges.

The proportion of the retail dollar the farmer gets varies widely with the different types of food. The livestock farmer averages 62 percent of the retail cost of meat; the dairy farmer gets 53 percent of the retail cost of milk and other dairy products; the farm wife gets 57 percent of the retail cost of poultry and eggs.

However, the wheat farmer gets only 22 percent of the retail price of wheat used in bread. The grain grower gets only 39 percent of the retail cost of all cereals.

Growers of fruits and vegetables get only 35 cents out of each dollar spent for fresh stocks and 21 cents out of each dollar spent for canned or processed goods.

In individual items, the farmer gets more than the retail prices of butter, or 70 cents out of each retail dollar. He gets the least from canned peaches, or only 14 cents out of each dollar. He only gets 17 cents out of each dollar spent for bread.

U. S. to Control Sugar Exports

The Government yesterday put sugar back under export controls, effective Sept. 1.

The Commerce Department, which is in charge of export controls, announced that each export shipment of sugar, valued at $250 or more, will require a license, unless the destination is Canada.

Government officials said the supply of sugar in this country is good, and the action is only "precautionary."

The Commerce Department explained that world prices of sugar, which are normally below prices in the U.S., have recently risen above the U.S. level, thus providing an incentive for shipments abroad.

The Agriculture Department recently made large sugar purchases from Cuba, and the restoration of export control was taken so these purchases will not be dissipated by undue overseas shipments.

A Commerce Department spokesman said:

"This is actually good news to consumers. It should not create any scare buying of sugar. The Government is simply insuring that we can keep the large sugar stocks that we have."

Pescia, Italy, Aug. 25 (U.P.).— Prof. Dionisio Anziotti, former president of the Supreme Court of International Law at The Hague, died in his home here last night. He was 81 years old.

Wages, Prices Halt Controls Bill Conference

A Senate-House conference committee deadlocked yesterday over the issue of giving President Truman a free hand in using standby wage-price controls in the proposed home front mobilization law.

The impasse delayed until Tuesday further consideration of the emergency measure and raised the prospect the wage-price section may be thrown out of the bill altogether.

Under the meaure passed by the House, Mr. Truman would be permitted to decide when and how controls would be imposed on wages and prices. But the Senate version contains an amendment by Senator John Bricker (R., O.) which would force him to invoke price ceilngs on an all or nothing basis and impose wage curbs simultaneously.

The President denounced this and warned that a "hodge podge" bill would hamper him on both the war and home fronts.

The conferees wrangled over the issue at a two-hour closed session, with most of the controversy between the Senate members.

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), of the Senate Banking Committee, said House conferees were willing to accept a compromise but that the Senate conferees split 4 to 4 and thus blocked the move.

He said he and others will try to eliminate the wage-price section entirely unless the committee agrees to some version close to the House plan.

"It's no good as it is," he said, referring to the Senate bill.

Maybank said separate legislation could be introduced later to cover standby wage-price controls.

President Truman did not ask for such powers originally, but agreed to accept them after a drive developed in Congress.

He has urged repeatedly that Congress not allow controversy over wage-price ceilings to delay action on the "immediately essential" parts of the mobilization measure which provide for allocations of industrial materials and credit controls.

Administration forces won a major victory Thursday when the conferees voted to let the President set up allocations as he sees fit.

They agreed yesterday on credit control provisions after adopting restrictive language to limit the authority to installment buying and other forms of consumer credit, and to real estate credit for new construction and major alterations.

Before the deadlock developed, the conferees also agreed to:

Eliminate a Senate provision for Government loans and subsidies for the mining industry.

Chute With 'Brains' Designed For High-Altitude Fliers

New York, Aug. 25 (NYHT).—A mechanical brain to reduce perilous human errors in parachute jumps from modern high-altitude war planes was announced today by the Air Force.

The device will be built into new chutes to be issued to crews of high-altitude fighters and B-29 and B-36 bombers. Its function is to open chutes automatically after time has been allowed for pilots to clear their planes and to fall through thin upper air into denser atmosphere near the earth.

Even if he clears his plane, the flier who opens his chute at extreme altitudes faces trouble. The cold is too intense for long exposure. There is so little oxygen that fliers may lose consciousness. The thin air permits such fast falls that the shock of an opening chute is intensified. A long chute drop in combat may expose a flier to enemy fire.

To work the new device, a flier simply pulls a handle connected with the automatic release when he bails out. The mechanism delays opening either until the flier reaches dense air or, if he is already within the earth's atmosphere, for a period long enough to clear the plane. In special circumstances, the flier is free to use a standard-type ripcord with which the chutes are also equipped.

For Unni Nayar

The plan originating in the National Press Club to honor the memory of Col. Unni Nayar is a sign both of the esteem in which the Indian public relations officer was held and the sense of fellowship of the newspaper fraternity. As to the former, this was demonstrated last Sunday in the extraordinary number of journalists who attended the memorial service at the Indian Embassy. Here the announcement was made that the newspapermen were raising a fund to finance a Unni Nayar fellowship in the United States for an Indian newspaperman. Nothing could be more appropriate. Colonel Nayar was a newspaperman before he entered the service of the Indian government, and, according to all the comment we have seen, a competent one. In addition, he was a man of character, compounded of compassion and courage and the forward view. His aim in life was to bridge the gulf between East and West which, alas, seems to be growing. Understanding will thrive on knowledge, and the fellowship will be a contribution to it, so that the fund should find much support in the Capital.

Allocations Chief

House and Senate conferees on the defense production bill have agreed to knock out an obstructive amendment to the Senate bill providing that authority to establish priorities and allocate scarce materials should be exercised only by the Secretary of Commerce. That was the only reasonable course to take. It remains to say that, as Mr. Truman has said, Secretary Sawyer had nothing to do with the initial action.

Senator Maybank who led the fight in the Senate against this restrictive proposal said that it had been expected that Secretary Sawyer's department would handle most of the allocation controls. He rightly insisted, however, that the program should be flexible. For instance, he pointed out that the Department of Commerce is not equipped to administer a system of allocations in case of agricultural commodities. That task logically should be assigned to the Department of Agriculture under the existing setup.

On the other hand, Senator Johnson, who sponsored the amendment that would have prevented the President from selecting the agencies that in his judgment are best fitted to administer specific allocations programs, stressed the importance of keeping priorities and allocations under the control of a single agency to avoid interdepartmental conflicts. If it should become necessary to create a war production board, he said, "we shall not have to reach out into half a dozen different agencies and pick up the things which should all be in one place."

The defect of this argument lies in the assumption that the Department of Commerce would be able to administer all the allocation and priority orders that may be issued from time to time. So long as allocations are limited to steel and a few basic materials needed for defense purposes, it can, no doubt, be trusted to handle these controls competently. But, as the program expands, the burden of administrative work might overwhelm a single department.

Moreover, as Senator Douglas pointed out, it may become necessary to establish a new board with personnel brought in from the outside to manage allocations; the Johnson amendment would have prevented any such transfer. It is a good thing, therefore, that the conference committee has decided to give the President a free hand in carrying out this particular program.

Clash Of Interests

Chairman Flanagan of the Public Utilities Commission has ordered the Potomac Electric Power Co. to submit estimates of the cost of servicing various classes of customers. This unusual request is due to the fact that Pepco proposes to bill Capital Transit for an additional $661,000—an increase of 71 percent over present charges—and increase the District's bill for street lighting by $710,000 or 60 percent, while raising residential rates by an average of only 4.3 percent. Since Pepco alleges that these adjustments are needed to put Capital Transit and the District in a more equitable position with respect to other customers, Chairman Flanagan quite properly calls for supporting information regarding the actual cost of the services rendered for purposes of comparison. Until that information is forthcoming judgment as to whether the rates paid by these two big customers are unreasonably low will have to be suspended.

The main issue is whether Pepco's petition for rate increases is justified, and the distribution of any increases that may be granted is a knotty question for the PUC to decide. The answer will not depend upon the outcome of a sparring match between lawyers representing the two public utilities concerned.

Deception On Korea

We are sorry to see Defense Secretary Johnson adding to the who-struck-John confusion over the withdrawal of American occupation troops from Korea in mid-1949. In testimony before a House Appropriations Subcommittee last month, Mr. Johnson indicated that the decision to withdraw from Korea was made on a level other than the military. Technically this is true, and the question put to Mr. Johnson was, to be sure, ambiguously worded. But to imply that the military had no voice in, or responsibility for, the decision is misleading, to say the least.

Actually the decision was made by the National Security Council in March, 1949, before Mr. Johnson was a member. However, it was made with the strong concurrence of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who were concerned about having American troops in an area which they felt was strategically indefensible. The decision was not questioned. On July 16, 1949, before the final withdrawal of American troops, Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, the Army's director of plans and operations, testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He said:

> We feel we have reached a point in the development of the South Korean army, auxiliary forces and the coast guard where their position would be better by our maintaining a military advisory group to assist in their development, training and education in American equipment, than would be the case if we retained the small tactical force which has been there up to now. We feel that they not only could come out but that they should come out, and their place be taken by the Korean military advisory group.

Amplifying his original statement, General Bolte added on June 17:

> . . . The Army, as the executive agent of the Joint Chiefs of Staff for the Far East, is not only agreeable to the withdrawal of the tactical formations from Korea, but are heartily in favor of it . . .

Thus the withdrawal had the emphatic indorsement of the military as well as backing by the State Department. The military, of course, has a strong voice on the Security Council in the person of Mr. Johnson, and the decision could have been challenged when it was subsequently reviewed. But it was not. The feeling of defense chiefs that Korea was a military liability which the United States should not attempt to defend persisted until the time of the invasion.

Indeed, it is hard to see how the United States could have followed any other course in view of the resolution of the United Nations General Assembly on December 12, 1948, calling on the occupying powers to withdraw their forces from Korea "as early as practicable." In a well propagandized gesture, Russia formally withdrew her forces by January, 1949, or six months before we did; and the United States would have been in a vulnerable position if it had flouted the Assembly. The decision was one of general United States policy, agreed to by all the responsible agencies, and there was nothing dishonorable about it. But it is not honorable for Mr. Johnson to leave the implication that the military was not consulted, or that there was some sinister influence at work.

Playing With Fire

In view of the Korean crisis the Government has, as expected, seized the railroads and thus prevented the strike called by the trainmen and conductors. During World War II the Government seized the railroads to avert a strike; in 1946 a short-lived strike, begun after the roads had been seized by the Government, was ended following President Truman's appeal to Congress to pass a law drafting strikers into the Army. In 1948 the President ordered the Army to take over operation of the lines and also got a court order enjoining a threatened strike after the unions had said that seizure would not prevent it.

In face of this record appeals to patriotism and denunciation of the railway unions for irresponsibility were plainly futile. The unions pointed out that strikes are legal after the procedures laid down by the Railway Labor Act have been followed. And threats of seizure not only failed to intimidate them but met with their approval. As a matter of fact, the unions that called the strike repeatedly urged the Government to resort to seizure and promised to stay on the job if it did. The catch in this offer is that they hoped by such means to obtain greater concessions than the railway fact-finding board has recommended or the carriers are willing to grant. President Roosevelt's practice of ignoring the findings of fact-finding boards when they proved unacceptable to the union is largely responsible for the increasing frequency of rail strikes or threats of strikes to back up union demands, and complacent acceptance of Government intervention.

There is a very real danger that the recalcitrant unions will be rewarded for their hold-up tactics by compliance with demands that the fact-finding board has rejected. If that happens, strikes will become the preferred weapon for settling disputes on terms dictated by the unions, and the end result will be either compulsory arbitration of disputes or permanent Government ownership and operation of the roads that would ban all strikes. Consequently the unions are fanning a fire that may burn them severely by insisting on their right to strike in disregard of the effect on the public health and welfare and the national security.

Spanish Rider

The case against a "single package" appropriations bill (or, according to the point of view, of "tacking") will be strengthened by the Spanish rider. The appropriations bill has now come out of conference with the loan to Spain reduced from 100 million dollars to 62.5 million dollars. The cut in the loan is, of course, meaningless; it is the theory that counts. The loan to Spain represents an invasion of the initiative of the Executive in foreign relations. The President has reiterated his opposition to the loan, yet the conferees have ignored him and now have put a dilemma on his doorstep. The dilemma is whether to veto the entire bill in order to get rid of this noxious feature, or, in view of the critical juncture in our foreign relations, to accept the bill with this worm in it in order to hasten the building up of our front line of defense in western Europe.

The loan is a shocking sign of irresponsibility on the part both of the legislative branch of Government and of a good many members of the military establishment. A Senator is said to have observed, "There was nothing like this pressure." The embarrassment to the President, as both military and Congress ought to know, is profound. The loan is worth many times the amount in propaganda to the Soviet Union, it debases the principles back of Marshall aid, and it is an impediment to unity across the Atlantic which is far more important in effective opposition to Moscow than armaments. Napoleon with the priority he gave to morale after materiel, would have so informed the Pentagon if he had been alive. Even in Spain the loan is bound to prove a boomerang, and the gods would laugh at the sorry joke of bribing a dictator whose only policy has been anticommunism to be anti-Communist.

Boomerang

One thing you have to say for Mr. Henry Wallace: when he converts, or reconverts, there is nothing halfway about it. In his anti-imperialist phase, when almost every remark he made was quoted approvingly by the Daily Worker, he had few peers in the denunciation of Washington and Wall Street. But now that he has become, at least in the Daily Worker's view, a mere fascist warmonger, he finds himself a contributor to one of the most vocal of anti-Communist outlets, the New Leader. In an article for that magazine explaining his reasons for resigning from the Progressive Party, Mr. Wallace criticizes Russia for the Communist invasion of South Korea as vigorously as any of the New Leader's own editorial writers could desire.

But he still nurtures the hope, he says, that Russia "seeing how determined and how united we are, will decide to cooperate with us through the U. N. to help the march of the common man to become constructive, not destructive." And this, it seems to us, brings Mr. Wallace back to just about the precise point from which he started. It was the delusion or pious hope that Russia could on any account be persuaded to cooperate with us that led him off on the wondrous boomerang journey from which he has just returned. The Russians, "seeing how determined and united we are," may well decide that they cannot afford to challenge or attack us. But it is a fatuity—an exceedingly dangerous fatuity—to look to them for any sort of cooperation. They take a very different view of the common man, and of the direction in which he ought to march, from our own. Until he faces this tough, disagreeable fact, Mr. Wallace will remain, we suspect, for all his indubitable patriotism, a prophet without much honor in his own country.

Earthquake

The damage that can be effected by an atom bomb still lags behind the potential of physical damage that can result from natural causes. Look, for instance, at the earthquake in eastern Tibet. The epicenter of the earthquake, believed to be the second most severe in the recorded history of the earth and the most severe of any quake occurring in an inhabited area, was in remote parts of Upper Assam in a Himalayan region occupied only by nomadic tribes, but the disaster took in all of northeastern India. It is estimated that the earthquake disturbed 30,000 square miles, affected five million persons, completely altered the geography of the Assam area, caused rivers to disappear and others to change course, completely polluted large stretches of the Brahmaputra, and destroyed many thousands of acres of arable land. In time science may achieve as large a range of destruction, but it is perhaps consoling that it hasn't yet.

AUTUMN FOX

That golden fox, the autumn,
Despoiler of summer's clustered vine,
Has eaten the lord of brightness
Deep in the leafy hill
Where swiftly now his musk grows faint
Along a rain-swept trail.
Not even the wildly tonguing
Foremost hound can tell
More than this of his going:
Here his shadow fell!
Out from his covert, lightly panting,
He threads the sorrel ferns,
Moving like air in motion,
And wide to the south his muzzle turns
Beyond the final fading
Of the hunter's urgent horn,
Where only the harvest crow will hear
His barking laughter spill,
Or see his rich brush burn like wine
Amid the dripping corn.

Rail Strike

Those who remember how the railroad unions forced Congress to pass the Adamson Act in 1916 will not be surprised that this time has been chosen to threaten once more a general railroad strike. That act, whose main effect, quite obviously, was to raise train wages about 37 percent, was passed and sustained under the thin pretense that it was a measure to shorten working hours in the interest of public health.

Having passed the law just within the time allowed by the unions, the Government next appointed a board, headed by General Goethals to ascertain whether the effect of the law would be to shorten working hours; and the board reported that it would not, at least not in the near future—it might have such a tendency in the course of time. The weakness then shown by the Government was not lost on the unions. Now, again, we have a war and an election. EDWARD GRAY.

Washington.

Headlines predict a Nation-wide railroad strike for Monday. A recent article in the newspapers stated that the unions wanted the Government to take over the railroads. Did you say communism! That is just what the Communists in the unions want and it is another step designed by Russia to spread communism throughout the world.

I worked for a railroad during World War I when the railroads were under Government control, and while it is true that salaries were raised, operation of the railroads were a waste of the taxpayers' money. The "red tape" of Government agencies affected the Railroad Administration and simple little everyday things took time with salary of as many as six or more different employes when one phone call or one letter to one office could have solved the problem.

War Objectives

Mr. Mark Sullivan, in his column of August 13, makes a very pitiful display of punching his way around in a paper bag and failing to punch his way out. He very rightly states, "the need is to know the objective for which we fight . . . we have no recognized and consciously self chosen objective." He then proceeds to the very uninspired and short-sighted conclusion that, "(the) problem is how to achieve a United Nations that does not contain Russia."

Does he believe that such a negative proposal by which the opposition is excluded will succeed in silencing that opposition? The opposition is an idea, an idea that can only be silenced in the minds of millions of people in the world today, by a better idea. Yes, Mr. Malik is using the United Nations as a sounding board for the furtherance of communism. But why cannot the free nations of the world effectively do the same for the furtherance of democratic ideals, even in the face of Communist propaganda?

The answer, to the reader's mind, seems fairly simple! The protagonists in their free world's struggle for the minds of men find their hands tied before the world by their own internal policies and practices. It is most difficult to conceive of the peoples of the world rallying to the cause of a democracy exemplified by the antics of Congressman Lanham, by the random vilification of Senator McCarthy, by Malan's practice of "apartheid" in South Africa (condoned by Great Britain, of course); not to mention the obvious racial and religious prejudice practiced here at home.

It would seem trite, yet necessary to suggest that a serious soul-searching is long overdue to the end that there can be a crystallization of objectives "other than the military one of victory"—to the end that there may evolve a democracy behind which not only the free people of the world can rally but also those of the non-Communist-controlled areas of the world, for communism will have lost its raison d'etre. Fortunately, what we do, speaks louder than what we say.

Nats Prediction

I predict that the Nats will finish the season in fifth place, shortly thereafter Clark Griffith will issue his annual statement that the club is "bound to get better" and to "wait until next year." Then he will proceed to vote himself and his shareholders a big fat dividend for this year. Meanwhile the club gives its supporters strictly second-rate treatment by being the only major league ball club without a downtown ticket office.

"Succoring Korea"

Your August 17 editorial, "Succoring Korea," is well reasoned and most timely. An Indo-American understanding is especially important because India's Nehru is a patriot-statesman who commands the confidence of the world.

A unified Korea and a unified Germany are goals that Walter Lippmann has been calling for, and they are goals that look toward world peace. A diplomatic solution of the present situation in Korea is desirable judged from every reasonable standpoint. It is under the present circumstances more fully in line with American ideals than to insist upon keeping up the fight until the North Koreans return to their own country.

Suspicion Of Tito

Regarding your editorial of August 19, criticizing the McCarran bill because it forbids admission of Yugoslavians, I think that Senator McCarran is quite right, for, after all, they are Communists in at least large part. Is there no end to our being duped by Stalin? By that I mean, in the instant respect, that I regard Tito as Stalin's wooden horse.

Does anybody believe that Tito will fight with us against his fellow Reds—the Reds who make it possible for him to ride to control over the dead body of Mihailovich?

China And The U. N.

The United Nations is conducting a campaign to put down Communist aggression in Korea through the use mainly of American military forces. At the same time the United States is giving recognition to the Chinese Nationalist government and is, independently of the U.N. using its naval power to protect Nationalist Formosa from a threatened attack by the de facto Chinese Communist government. This complicated intermingling of policies is embarrassing Mr. Austin at Lake Success and contains potential dangers to American military and diplomatic prestige in the future.

Mr. Malik has used the refusal to admit the Chinese Communist representative to the Security Council as an excuse for refusing to bring before the Council the question of North Korean aggression. At the same time America is giving support to a Chiang Kai-shek government which is unpopular in Asia, support which consequently reduces American prestige in Asia. Meanwhile, the Chinese Communists may come to the assistance of the North Korean Communists and help them resist the U.N. punitive action in Korea, thus involving the U.N.-U.S. forces in further military difficulties. The handling of this situation thus requires great delicacy and imagination and the formation of a major policy of great significance in the East and throughout the world.

The policy of refusing to seat the Chinese Communist member before the question of Korean aggression is discussed in the U.N. is thoroughly sound. However, this is not enough. Sir Benegal Rau's intervention in the U.N. impasse now affords the chance for the U.S. to go further by suggesting proposals to the committee of nonpermanent members of the Council. These proposals might take the following form:

(a) The U.N. shall continue its military action to drive the aggressors across the thirty-eighth parallel, after which plans would be drawn to hold free elections to create a government for all Korea. Korea would then become a member of an eastern federal union consisting of itself, Japan, Formosa, and eventually eastern Siberia. This union would be protected by a U.N. police force drawn in considerable part from the local union members;

(b) the Chinese Communist government, in view of its threatened resistance to U.N. action in Korea, and its current help given the North Koreans, would not be recognized or admitted to the Security Council. However, continued recognition of Chiang Kai-shek and continuance of his delegate on the Council would be made contingent on certain reforms, reforms which in general would wean popular support in China away from the Communist de facto government, and attract it to Chiang Kai-shek.

Chiang would be strongly advised to seek a return to power in China by (1) getting rid of corrupt and incompetent elements and by including Chinese moderate elements in his regime; (2) by promising drastic land reforms in China and by eliminating usurious interest rates; (3) by promising a regime independent of Russian or other foreign domination, and a regime which included full control over rich Manchuria, and (4) by promising a regime of such a sort that American technical know-how needed for industrialization would be available to it, know-how which Russia cannot provide now in the quantities needed.

The generalissimo could be firmly advised that such a course is his only salvation, and that as a result of any other course his regime would be overcome by the Communists anyway. If he refused to make these reforms and endorse this program he could be threatened with withdrawal of American protection in Formosa. As to the rest of Asia, America would win friends because it would obtain the position of supporting governments which attract and deserve popular non-Communist approval. At the same time the Chinese Communist government would probably find small popular support in China for intervention in Korea against the UN.

Campaign Countermarch

By Malvina Lindsay

Two Platforms

"NOW THAT you're starting your campaign for reelection to Congress, Mr. Backup, what will be your main issue?"

"Korea, of course."

"Just what do you advocate doing when we get back to the thirty-eighth parallel—or, better still, how would you get us there?"

"What? Er—say do you know who got us into this jam in Korea? I ask you what was this traitor Ebb—I mean my honorable opponent—doing with that 48 billion dollars for arms?"

"You mean Mr. Ebb was mishandling funds in the Defense Department?"

"His party was. It's all the same. Why, I demand to know, didn't he stop this Communist invasion of China, this Communist infiltration into Indo-China, Indonesia, Tibet, Malaya, Burma, India, Hungary, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia——"

"Wait! I'm a little confused. Are you talking about Mr. Ebb?"

"I'm talking about his party. It's all the same. Why did this subversive scoundrel—I mean my honorable opponent—sell us out to Stalin at Potsdam and Yalta? Why didn't he invade Europe through the Balkans? Why did he let Chamberlain get away with Munich? Why did he get taken for a ride at Versailles? Why did he bring on the panic of 1893? Why——"

"JUST A minute! What are you advocating about Formosa?"

"Formosa! That's where he really sold us out. Why is he brazenly defending Chinese Reds?"

"Oh, has Mr. Ebb come out for the Chinese Communist regime?"

"Debaters, Inc., has. He's tied up in that."

"Really! I thought Debaters, Inc., never took any official stand on anything."

"Some of its members have been defending socialism. It all gets back to Ebb. Why didn't he see that we had better tanks than the Russians? Why did he give away the secret of the atom bomb——"

"Wait! Wait! Do you mean Mr. Ebb was the one——"

"I'm talking about his party. It's all the same thing."

"Mr. Backup, surely you're going to come out for lower taxes and a balanced budget—"

"That reminds me! Why didn't he—

"Excuse me, I have an appointment with Mr. Ebb."

"AS A CANDIDATE for Congress Mr. Ebb, what will be your main plank?"

"Korea, of course. Where was this chameleon Backup—I mean my honorable opponent—when the 60 million dollar aid for South Korea was defeated in Congress last January? He was the one who gave the original green light to the North Koreans."

"Wait! Did Mr. Backup vote against that bill?"

"A lot of his pals did. It's the same thing. And why did he help arm the Chinese Communists with American guns——"

"Just a minute. I want your platform for handling the Korean situation."

"All right. Now why did this Judas Iscariot—I mean my honorable opponent—send millions of dollars of supplies to Chiang Kai-shek to be turned over to Chinese Communists? Why didn't he make the Chiang regime clean house? Why didn't he throw colonialism out of Asia? Why did he wreck the League of Nations? Why did he lose the Battle of Bull Run?

"EXCUSE ME, but just what is your platform on Formosa?"

"Why are we in such a mess here with all Europe mad at us? Because he's been working in cahoots with the China lobby."

"Are you saying Mr. Backup is tied up with a pressure group?"

"Oh, no, but he's been running around with all sorts of lobbyists. What about that big cocktail party he went to on March 19, 1947, at a swanky downtown hotel? Do you know who was there? Horatius Wadd! The big chopsticks tycoon."

"Let's get back to 1950. What is your stand on what we should do to meet the Communist issue in Europe?"

"Where would all Europe be today if this dodo Backup had had his way? Under the heel of Moscow! Why did he try to silence the Voice of America? Why has he been sniping at ECA?"

"I thought he voted—on the final roll call—for ECA."

"A lot of his pals didn't. It's all the same thing."

"Mr. Ebb, arent you going to say anything about pensions, medical insurance, the common man——"

"That reminds me! Why didn't he——"

Their Lives Or Ours

If it were known to each state of the world that aggression on its part would result in an atomic attack, sponsored by the United Nations, upon that state, it seems as though Russia's method of aggression by means of having a communistic satellite invade its neighbor would be thwarted. Under this whip would any of Stalin's pawns be first to heed the call to attack? If so, and that pawn were destroyed as promised, who would be second to follow the Russian bugler?

Also, by advising all states not to resist attack but to let any invader, pending prompt U. N. action, march into foreign land, it would be made very difficult for Malik to protest that the actual victim of aggression was in fact the aggressor.

Woeful Stockpile

By Marquis Childs

Neglected Strategic Materials

IF THE facts were known about the lack of American stockpiles of critical materials, there would be the makings of a national scandal. Like so many other grim truths in this town, they are classified secret.

Childs

This serves at least to keep the figures from the public. Whether it keeps them from Russian intelligence is another and much more doubtful matter. The deficiencies are so glaring, and the figures on production and consumption so widely published, that probably anyone with a pencil and paper could come close to the answers.

On July 23, 1946, Congress passed a stockpiling act with the expectation that the Munitions Board would acquire, over a five-year period, stockpiles covering minimum requirements. These minimum requirements, according to a report of the Munitions Board for January, 1949, would "do no more than ease the desperately critical shortages that might otherwise block our war production completely."

Such minimum requirements, estimated to cost $3,773,000,000, were based on certain optimistic assumptions. It was assumed, for example, that a continuous flow of large quantities of materials would be available, and obtained, from overseas sources in a Third World War. During 1942 and '43, German submarines repeatedly reduced the flow of critical materials to a trickle, threatening to shut down war industries. Today, Russia is estimated to have twice as many subs as the Nazis, and many of the improved schnorkel type.

ON JANUARY 23 of this year the Munitions Board reported that only 30 percent of the minimum stockpiles had been acquired. Half of this total came from surplus Government stocks out of World War II and ECA purchases. This meant that only little more than 15 percent of the minimum goal had actually been bought by the Munitions Board in 3½ years. The stockpile at that point contained materials valued at only $1,149,000,000.

A month ago the Munitions Board reported that it had acquired 38.4 percent of minimum requirements. Another 12 percent was reported to be "on order," and, incidentally, what a familiar sound that phrase "on order" has. It was used to cover up woeful deficiencies in the 1940-41 period—a period remote in history when America still had time to rearm while other nations bore the first wave of attack.

Shocking as it is, this overall percentage does not reveal the real seriousness of the present situation. Some materials on the list of 71 different commodities to be stockpiled are of far more critical importance than others. Such minerals as manganese and chrome are examples. Manganese must go into every ton of steel that is made.

It is in these super-critical fields that the most serious shortages are believed to exist. If many American ships were sunk in a major war, these shortages would cripple vital war industry to the point of a shutdown.

YET EVEN now, insofar as I have been able to discover, steps to remedy these deficiencies are not being taken with anything like the urgency required. It has been said that this is the "phony war" phase of the present conflict. If that is true, it should be added that we are still in the period of phony defense.

Little or nothing has been done to develop domestic sources of strategic minerals to replace, or at any rate to supplement, foreign sources. That involves paying a premium price, and it also means cutting across established patterns of trade dominated by large and powerful business.

In May of this year Representative Wesley A. D'Ewart of Montana, in a speech on the floor of the House, pointed to the woeful deficiencies in stockpiling. He recommended the creation of an independent agency "to commence immediately and carry out an intensive, all-out 10 to 12-year Government-financed program, designed, and geared, to have private enterprise explore, develop and mine the Nation's undeveloped mineral deposits and expand existing operations."

It was already very late when that recommendation was made; late particularly with respect to the need to keep skilled labor in the mines. Even though the most precious of commodities, time, is running out very fast, it still may not be too late.

The economic controls bill passed by Congress contains a provision authorizing expansion of industry with Government help to get new production. That is a beginning. But, because of the foot-dragging in the past, a new agency is probably essential for the required push and zeal it will take.

Labor Leader Freed

$25,000 BOND—Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO labor leader, signs his $25,000 bail bond before United States Commissioner Francis St. J. Fox in the Federal Building in San Francisco yesterday while his wife, Nancy, looks on. Bridges has been in jail since August 5 when his bail was ordered revoked. He was at liberty pending appeal on his conviction on a perjury charge. The Government had contended he was a "menace" to the security of the Nation because he opposed United Nations action in Korea

Attorney General Won't Let Prosecutor of Bridges Quit

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath yesterday refused to accept the resignation of F. Joseph Donohue, prosecutor of labor-leading Harry Bridges.

Asked the reason, McGrath said of Donohue, "He has done an excellent job and is a fine prosecutor."

But Donohue, the genial Washington attorney who left his practice here to bring about the indictment and conviction of longshoreman Bridges, said it a different way.

"I know the Bridges case inside out. I can probably answer any questions that might come up about it."

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, Bridges walked out of jail yesterday under $25,000 bond pending an appeal of his perjury conviction. Bridges had been found guilty of falsely swearing in 1945 he was not a member of the Communist Party. His appeal bond had been revoked 20 days ago after O'Donohue termed him a bad security risk because of the Korean war, but then the Appeals Court ordered Bridges' release.

As Bridges left jail he said:

"I want to say that I am not out yet. The whole country is a prison. In Donohue's words there is no room for personal beliefs and minority opinion in this country. Donohue was only living up to what he believes. He even objected to the court's having its opinion," he said.

Donohue tried to resign for the official reason that his job was now done as the trial lawyer in the case. Also, he said that as a private citizen he would feel more free to speak.

Donohue's comment on Bridges' release was, "God help America."

He pointed to Bridges' left-wing affiliations and again accused the labor leader of being a part in the Communist network in America.

"I'd hate to be in a foxhole in Korea while Harry Bridges roamed the West Coast at the head of 70,000 longshoremen and could dictate what supplies I'd get," he said.

Back in his office here, Donohue looked very tired. He had spent two hours at the Justice Department conferring with officials. He said he will keep his private practice and will be in a "standby" position so far as the Bridges case goes.

What did he learn from 17 months of prosecuting Bridges, Donohue was asked.

"I learned that when Communists are prosecuted, they will try to bring the court into disrepute, and try to provoke the judge into error. It is the method of the Reds to get the American 'capitalistic' courts held in contempt," he replied.

Also, Donohue said the Bridges case taught him to hate and fear communism within America as the country's greatest menace.

"Why spend 32 billions for protection from attack from outside our borders when we have within saboteurs and subversives in our midst that we can't seem to do very much about," he said.

'Colonial Rule' By U. S. Hit At Red Rally

Berlin, Aug. 25 NYHT).—Three thousand Communists from East and West Germany, pretending to constitute a "National Congress" representing both parts of this divided country, today opened a two-day meeting to draft a program to undermine the three Western Powers and bring West Berlin and West Germany under their control.

East German Premier Otto Grotewohl, principal speaker at today's session, called for "national resistance" to the Western occupation powers and the West German government. He said the congress will rally the German people to take action "to liberate itself from American colonial rule."

Neuen Deutschland, official Communist organ, indicated one of the weapons against the West will be labor strikes. It proposed that West German workers undertake a general strike against the government.

Through the Soviet German-language newspaper, Taegliche Rundschau, Grotewohl issued a statement saying the "National Congress" will fight against partition of Germany, the disruption of internal German trade, the incorporation of West Germany in a Western bloc and against creation of a West German army which would engage in war against the Soviet Union.

Grotewohl told the Congress that the cry, "Ami (misnamed Americans) go home" will become so loud "these gentlemen will soon find themselves back in their own Golden West."

He ridiculed American setbacks in Korea by saying their performance had destroyed "the myth" they are invincible. He accused the United States of preparing a third world war in Germany.

He complained also that Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Dr. Kurt Schumacher, head of the Socialist Party, are prepared to offer the American Government more troops than the latter demand.

The congress will approve the platform of the October election in East Germany as a "national platform" on which the entire country should mount. Elections, results of which already have been announced, will give Communists control of 70 percent of the seats of the East German Parliament.

Though half the 3000 delegates were supposed to come from West Germany (indicating a disposition to treat West Germany as the equal of East Germany) the congress succeeded in attracting only about 750. Most of these smuggled across the border or secured West German travel permits under false pretenses.

West Berlin papers demanded that West German police arrest them when they return home on the grounds they violated West German and Allied regulations. Such action will probably be taken.

For W. Germany

Bonn Asks Light, Mobile 'Police' Army

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 25. (U.P.).—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has proposed a motorized, lightly-armed Federal police force as a new "basis for discussion" with the Allies on the tangled and intricate issue of West German defense, sources close to the Chancellor said today.

Adenauer gave a rough outline of this force, which he hopes will number about 80,000 men, to American High Commissioner John J. McCloy in a special meeting last night.

An Allied announcement said Adenauer promised a "prompt and definite" explanation of his defense and rearmament thinking for consideration of the high commission.

Adenauer's plan suggested that vehicles and weapons, probably light machine guns, be furnished by the Americans. He suggested that the British and the French provide uniforms, German sources said.

Under Adenauer's plan, the German government would meet payroll and barracks quartering expenses. But, it was stressed, since such a police force would contribute to Western security, there should be no boost in occupation levies on the Federal Government.

Government quarters expressed the hope that the new force would be set up by Christmas, but emphasized that no beginning can be made unless the three Western foreign ministers, who meet in New York next month, give a go-ahead.

German General Urges Bonn Army of Veterans

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Col. Gen. Leo von Schweppenburg, a German tank expert who fought the Allies in Normand in 1944, proposed today that West Germany recruit her World War II veterans for defense against Communist aggression.

Schweppenburg had a long talk with Chancellor Adenauer about a West German armed force. Later he held a news conference—the first conducted by a German general since 1945—to disclose these discussions.

19 Nazi War Criminals Freed Years Early for Good Conduct

Landsberg, Germany, Aug. 25 (A.P.).—Nineteen Nazi war criminals, including former steel baron Friedrich Flick, were freed today. Good prison conduct accounted for their release about two years early.

Publicity shy, they scurried away from newsmen who waited in the rain to meet them at the gates.

They had served about two thirds of their sentences on such charges as exploiting slave labor, assaulting concentration camp prisoners, committing atrocities and other crimes against humanity. All but one had been sentenced to seven years.

The men looked like hoboes as they scrambled out of the prison in which Hitler wrote "Mein Kampf." They wore ill-fitting clothes and each carried a small bundle.

The prize prisoner was Flick, 67, a beefy man whose wartime steel empire employed 130,000 workers. He was convicted by an American military court in Nurenberg in 1947 on charges of exploiting Russian slave labor and looting occupied countries.

"Go away! Get out!" Flick shouted as he scurried to a waiting sedan. A woman in the car held an umbrella in front of his face.

Down the road a few hundred yards, Otto Dietrich, 50, who was Hitler's press chief, prepared to enter a car, but hastily slammed the door, pulled a gray cap over his eyes and took off on foot when newsmen sought to question him.

Dietrich leaped a fence, ran down a railroad track, zig-zagged across a field and disappeared in a clump of bushes.

Dietrich and Walther Darre, former Food and Agriculture Minister also freed, were convicted in the "ministry cases" in Nuernberg of SS membership and atrocities against civilians. Karl Rasche, another released prisoner, was sentenced for plundering.

The others—little known—were convicted of concentration camp atrocities and brutal treatment of captured Allied airmen.

Stepinac Seriously Ill

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—The Daily News bulletin from the Vienna cardinal's office reported today that Yugoslav Archbishop Aloysius Stepinac is seriously ill in a Yugoslav jail. The report said that Stepinac, serving a 16-year term, is suffering from tuberculosis of the lungs. "Medical care is inadequate," the report said.

Colombian Seeks to Make Korea His War

"Eager" is the word for Ernesto Puerto Fernandez, 36, of Bogota, Colombia.

Fernandez, a retired Colombian army infantry captain, paid his own way to this country hoping to join the fight against communism in Korea.

The whole thing began when he wrote a letter to the Colombian Ministry of War July 15, volunteering for duty in Korea. The ministry replied that the U. N. had not yet asked Colombia to contribute troops.

Fernandez then visited the United States Embassy in Bogota seven times, only to be told he would have to take out citizenship papers to fight with United States forces.

Taking matters into his own hands, he sold his farm and sent his wife and four children to live with his parents. He arrived in Miami Monday.

In Miami, Fernandez, a veteran of the Peruvian War of 1932, tried to enlist and was turned down because he had not taken out citizenship papers.

He visited the State Department Thursday with a representative of the Colombian Embassy and told his story.

State Department officials said yesterday that no action had been taken in Fernandez's case. A spokesman for the Colombian Embassy said the ambassador would probably negotiate in the captain's behalf with the Departments of State and Defense.

"I'm not worried about rank," Fernandez said. "I'll be a private and if you won't have me as a private I'll grease trucks. I can cook—I'll even go as a cook."

Fernandez sees no reason why he should give up his Colombia citizenship "to fight in a common cause." But he says he is going to Korea, "even if I have to walk."

Thin-Skinned Police Shy From Sports Duty

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 25 (A.P.). Sixty-nine of Charleston's 87 policemen have informed Chief Charles W. Ray they don't want any more duty at the city's football stadium.

The officers complained of the "abusive treatment received from the public at football games and other events."

Last Friday night, their petition said, the stands hurled such taunts as "blackjack gang," "Ray's thugs," "Gestapo" and "come up here and blackjack us."

said both the United States and Britain have tried to destroy Russia instead of accepting Russia's offers of peaceful coexistence.

Later Malik made a brief reference to the Formosa question.

He said the delegates had received a message from the Chinese Communist government charging the United States with "virtual occupation of the Chinese island of Formosa" and had also received Austin's letter. He said he assumed the delegates would want time to study them.

Malik proposed that the Council adjourn, but U.S. Delegate Ernest A. Gross asked for the floor and read the Austin letter into the record.

Austin quoted in full President Truman's statement of June 27 and his message to Congress July 19. The first announced the U. S. decision to send military forces to Korea and the Seventh Fleet into the Strait of Formosa. The second amplified the U.S. policy in the Pacific and said the U.S. would strengthen its aid to the Philippines and to the French in Indo-China.

Austin said the action in regard to Formosa was taken at a time when the Chinese Communists were threatening to attack Formosa. Such an attack, he said, would have threatened the security of U.S. forces in Korea.

He then said:

"The United States would welcome United Nations consideration of the case of Formosa. We would approve full United Nations investigation here or on the spot. We believe that United Nations consideration would contribute to a peaceful, rather than a forcible, solution of that problem.

"We do not believe that the Security Council need be or will be diverted from its consideration of the aggression against the Republic of Korea."

Austin again touched on the question of the future status of Formosa—a sore spot in relations between the United States and the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek. Austin said the United States holds the actual status of Formosa is that of a territory taken from Japan by the Allied forces in the Pacific. Its future status, he said, will be determined by international action. This has been challenged by Nationalist China's chief delegate, T. F. Tsiang, who insists Formosa is a part of China.

Good Humor Man Put in Mothballs

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 25 (A.P.). Lieut. Col. R. E. McCaee, directing maneuvers of Army Reservists and Regulars at A. P. Hill military reservation, spotted a glaringly white vehicle among camouflaged aggressor forces.

He turned questioningly to an aide.

"It's the ice cream man, sir," replied the latter.

"Give him my compliments and order him to withdraw until this 'war' is over," said the colonel.

European Assembly Approves Plan for Human Rights Court

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 25 (A.P.). The European Consulative Assembly approved unanimously today a proposal to set up a European Supreme Court to enforce a bill of human rights in member states.

At the same time, the Assembly's general affairs committee sidetracked Winston Churchill's proposal for a unified European army for at least several weeks.

[German units under German officers would fight in a European army to "defend freedom and human rights," Heinrich von Brentano, floor leader of the Bonn Assembly, said in Strasbourg in the course of a two-hour press conference in which he clarified the German view on defense, according to the New York Herald-Tribune News Service. It is known that many members of the German government party (as well as the Allied High Commissioner) have deplored the course of recent statements by Federal Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, and it may be assumed that von Brentano's press conference was called in order to set the record straight. —Editor's note.]

By a unanimous vote, the committee decided it was "undesirable at this time" to place any half-way measure before the full 125-member, 15-nation Assembly, the lower house of the Council of Europe. Instead the committee instructed its security subcommittee to pursue the proposal and come up with a report "as soon as possible."

Churchill's motion for creation of a unified army was adopted August 11, by the Assembly itself, 89 to 5.

The British Conservative leader said creation of a trustworthy Western defense system in the next two years would lessen the threat of a third world war.

The motion was referred to the committee for processing and it was caught in a prerecess crush. The Assembly is due to adjourn early next week until mid-November.

The Assembly's roll call vote on the human rights court was 111 in favor. There were no abstentions or opposing votes.

Britain's Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe, one of the chief Allied prosecutors at the Nuernberg war crimes trials, was chairman of the legal committee which drafted the court proposal. He told the Assembly such a court would be a barrier against dictatorship.

"It can be a beacon to our friends now in darkness," he said, "and a passport for their return."

West Europe Repels 'Attack' In War Games

Fontainebleau, France, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Western Europe's fighter planes intercepted and beat back heavy mock atom bomb attacks on half a dozen French, Belgian and Dutch cities today as the biggest peacetime aerial maneuvers in the history of the Continent started.

Royal Air Force and United States Air Force bombers tried to bomb Rotterdam, Paris, Brussels, Reims, Liege and Metz, but were "thrown back," a spokesman for the Brussels Treaty states said.

The three-day air exercises were the first major tests of western Europe's fighter plane and radar defenses. Planes of the Brussels Treaty states—Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands—plus the United States, are taking part.

A three-hour attack is scheduled for Saturday morning and night.

At dawn, the bombers took off from bases in Britain for their mock "atom invasion." They wheeled south to Germany, then were scheduled to drive west at high noon, simulating an attack from Russia.

On the side of the defense were the "scopes" of dozens of radar stations, the speed and fire power of hundreds of jet fighters. Swarms of bombers and fighters were locked in dogfights over industrial targets.

British Air Chief Marshal Sir James Robb, chief of the Brussels Treaty air forces, said the strategists wanted to make the defense maneuver as difficult as possible.

The attack, he said, would be exactly like those that would be made "on the outbreak of war." All western Europe from the northern fringes of Holland to the borders of Switzerland would provide fair targets for aerial invaders.

Capital Store Sales Up 16% During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended August 19 showed a gain of 16 percent over the like 1949 period, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

For the four weeks ended August 19, local sales were 19 percent increased over the year-ago level.

These gains were a definite slackening from the pace of late July and early August. The tapering off was noted also in the Fifth Reserve District and throughout the Nation.

Regionally, dollar volume was up 12 percent for the week and 20 percent for the four-week period.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that all Reserve districts reported increases for the week ended August 19. The Dallas district had the biggest jump with 21 percent, while the Boston district showed only a 2 percent rise.

By districts, here is the sales picture as compared with the corresponding period last year:

Rubber Futures Break After 3-Day Upsurge

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Prices of rubber for future delivery broke sharply on the commodity exchange today after advancing the daily permissible trading limit of 2 cents a pound for three days in a row.

Rubber futures closed 1.10 to 2 cents a pound below the final quotations of Thursday, reflecting profit-taking here and lower prices in the London and Singapore markets.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP).—The weight of an increasing movement of spring wheat was too much for the bread cereal on the Board of Trade today. Prices ended fractionally lower after a burst of buying at the start quickly faded.

The rest of the market paid little attention to wheat. Both soybeans and lard scored moderate gains in line with firming tendencies for most fats and oils. Corn and oats moved within a narrow range. Only rye followed wheat with a definitely lower trend.

Wheat closed ⅜ to ¾ lower; corn, ¼ to ⅝ higher; oats unchanged to ¼ lower; rye, ⅛ to 1⅛ lower; soybeans, 1¼ to 2¼ higher, and lard, 3 to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

2000 Cretans Set To Fight Over Virgin

$560 Daily Take

Va. Hospital Hits Gold on Draft Tests

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Arlington Hospital has grossed an average of $560 every weekday since July 19, taking X-rays and blood tests of local area selectees, it was reported yesterday.

On one day the charge to the Army ran as high as $784—but it's not all gravy, said John J. Anderson, hospital administrator.

During the period from July 19, date of the renewal of physical examinations for selectees, to Aug. 23, the hospital examined some 2098 men for a gross of $14,686, records of the Washington Military District showed yesterday. A Pentagon spokesman said the situation is much the same throughout the country.

Not "War Profiteering"

It's not a case of "war profiteering," said Anderson. The hospital, he explained, was approached by the Army and asked if it had the facilities to do the examining. Army officials themselves set the rates of $5 for each X-ray and its interpretation, and $2 for the blood tests, he said.

Since the start, Anderson said, the Army has been sending groups of from 40 to 112 men to the hospital daily, except Saturdays and Sundays. Already, he said, the hospital has had to hire two more X-ray technicians and is advertising for a third. It also must buy a new $6000 X-ray machine to help out the hospitals "overloaded" one.

The hospital administrator said Army officials told him they needed the X-ray and test reports in 24 hours. At overcrowded, understaffed Walter Reed General Hospital, he said they told him, they'd have to wait as long as a week for the reports.

"When they first asked me, I said we could do it, but that I wanted to get the hospital board's approval," said Anderson. "At the board meeting, the members said we will do anything we can if the military requests it."

To date, Anderson said yesterday, the hospital has received only one check from the Government, for $1600 for work done during July. He wasn't complaining.

Situation Elsewhere

News reports from other sections of the Nation told of such cases as that of a Milwaukee doctor earning $1125 a working day on selective -ray tests, and an Omaha physician making $450 a day for the X-raying alone.

At the Pentagon, yesterday, an Army spokesman said that Army doctors will take over the work when enough doctors become available as mobilization progresses. He blamed a service shortage of radiologists and X-ray technicians, rather than lack of equipment.

Under present price schedules, it was explained, private doctors furnishing their own equipment are allowed $3 for each inductee X-rayed, and $2 for the interpreting of that X-ray. With Army equipment, the doctor gets the $2 interpretation fee.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, told reporters he had had no advance knowledge of the situation.

"I shall check on it," he promised.

An inquiry also was promised by Representative Carl Vinson, D. C., Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

"Of course the Government will get a lot of that back in income taxes," suggested Vinson.

Finnish Regime Wins

Heraklion, Crete (Saturday), Aug. 26 (U.P.).—More than 2000 men were poised today for a modern Trojan war over a beautiful virgin who was carried off to a mountain cave by a wealthy young man who boasts the finest mustache in all Crete.

The opposing forces were about evenly divided as they took battle positions around the peaks of Mt. Ida, which according to Greek mythology was the birthplace of Zeus, chief of the gods.

Another 1000 national policemen rushed up the mountain slope, hoping to maintain the peace.

Five hundred of the armed civilians sought to rescue ravenhaired, 19-year-old Tassoula Petrakogeorgi, who was carried off after leaving a movie theater.

The other 500 sought to help handsome Costas Kefaloughianis keep his captive, whom he intends to marry, with or without her father's consent.

The wishes of this modern Helen of Troy were not yet known.

Former Premier Constantin Tsaldaris entered the feud. He asked Premier Sophocles Venizelos to give the match his blessing and serve as best man at the wedding.

Venizelos said no.

A 7 p. m. to 5 a. m. curfew was clamped on Heraklion, to prevent any nocturnal disturbances. The city's prosecutor also prohibited the publication of any news about the abduction.

It all began when the 35-year-old Kefaloughianis asked George Petrakogeorgi for his daughter's hand. Petrakogeorgi, Liberal deputy for Candia, said he would rather see his daughter dead than married to a Populist (Royalist) such as Kefaloughianis.

On Sunday, Tassoula, chaperoned by relatives, went to the movies. As she was leaving, police said, Kefalouchians and six armed friends seized her, pushed her into an automobile and raced up Mount Ida.

Boxcar Shortage 'Frightful', Says Senator Johnson

Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Senate Commerce Committee said yesterday the shortage of railroad boxcars in the United States has created "a frightful situation."

Johnson summoned Chairman J. Monroe Johnson of the Interstate Commerce Commission to appear before the Senate committee Wednesday.

He said farmers are piling grain on the ground throughout the Western States because they can't get boxcars to carry it to market terminals.

$290,000 Defense Fund Voted

D. Clay, head of civilian defense in New York State. He said General Clay advised him to emphasize two points: First, that the problem of civilian defense is up to each community to handle, and second, that every community is watching for the District to set an example.

"I think that from what is happening in the world today, you need this money and you will need a lot more than $290,000," Teague told the House.

Representative Canfield said he called earlier in the day to the office of W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Canfield said he was told the office feels every last dollar of the $290,000 request is justified, and that "if we cut this amount, the States and cities will not do a proper job and civilian defense throughout the United States will be not only a failure but will be a joke."

Canfield pointed out that Symington estimated that adequate civilian defense could cut atom bomb casualties by as much as 75 percent.

"While we talk $30,000 for civilian defense in the Nation's Capital, Russia is training thousands of squads for civilian defense," Canfield said.

Canfield added that he had talked with George Craig, national commander of the American Legion, and "he was aghast" at the funds cut. Canfield said his own reaction was "consternation."

According to Canfield, $290,000 could well be taken from the impounded funds of the Freedom Fair which he said had ended in "futility and disrepute."

It was Congressman Davis who disclosed that the District Committee, [illegible] its morning meeting, had assigned a special subcommittee headed by Teague to go to bat for restoring the needed civilian defense funds. "Other cities are looking to Washington," Davis said. "This money is urgently needed."

Representative Smith, who lives in Alexandria, pointed out that the money for civilian defense here comes out of District revenues paid by District taxpayers and not out of the Federal Treasury.

"It is intended for the District to be a model for the rest of the Nation," Smith said. "If civilian defense is worth doing at all, it's worth doing effectively and efficiently."

Horan, former chairman of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, reminded the House that even if the District has a surplus the money cannot be spent without action by Congress. If Congress adjourns, nothing could be done to provide money for civilian defense until next year, Horan declared.

Representative Smith agreed.

Representative Stockman said that the $30,000, the amount earlier requested by the Commissioners, would provide an orderly approach to civilian defense planning. He said the plans on which the $290,000 request was based were not well thought out. He said the committee in no way opposed a proper civilian defense planning setup.

Shimon to Tell 'Tap' Story

mittee in closed hearings about wire tapping in the Occidental Hotel. The main point of the Shimon account, as told by Chairman Pepper, was that he was searching for a Cuban sugar swindler, wanted by the Miami (Fla.) police.

Van Arkel asked Robison what sort of conversations he had heard. Robison said he recalled hearing Senator Mead (former Senator James M. Mead, D., N. Y.), call the Federal Communications Commission from Fulton's office; a man by the name of Higgins (presumably Andrew J. Higgins) a boat manufacturer, call from New Orleans, and also conversations with Argentine manufacturers or embassy people about selling surplus supplies.

Robison said that Shimon once told him to pay particular attention to calls about any of the investigating committees, but he did not recall any such conversations.

Robinson said Shimon also took him to the wiretapping job at the Mayflower to work with Precinct Det. James G. Bryant, now of the sex squad. This has been identified as the wire tapping of the telephones of Hughes' associates.

Shimon's testimony, according to Pepper, has emphasized he had no interest in the Hughes investigation, but did the wire tapping to follow Abner "Chick" Lappin, the man pointed out by Senator Brewster to be shadowing the Senator. A Pepper committee subpena for Lappin has been issued, but has not been served. Deputy Senate Sergeant-at-Arms John Lacovara said he had received word from Lappin's family that Lappin has been in Mexico City and may return to town in the near future, possibly over the weekend or early next week. Lacovara said he understood Lappin was anxious to testify.

Lacovara said he had no leads toward locating Henry Grunewald, former FBI agent and part-time consultant for Pan American Airways, for whom the Pepper committee has also issued a subpena. Grunewald has been described variously as a close social friend of Shimon and as Shimon's intermediary with the Brewster committee.

Van Arkel, quizzing Robison to hit at Shimon's story of shadowing Lappin, asked if Shimon ever showed Robison a picture of Lappin. "No, sir," said Robison.

"Did Shimon mention Lappin's name?" asked van Arkel.

"I don't recall the name," said Robison.

"Did he tell you to be one the lookout for a man who talked with a mouthful of mush?" asked van Orkel.

Robison did not recall. Van Arkel then showed Robison a picture of Lappin he said had been found in Shimon's files at the District Attorney's office. Robison did not recall having seen it before. In other testimony, Robison said he was put on the Hughes wire tapping after returning from vacation, indicating he began the job some time after it had started.

Robison also told the committee he quit the wire tapping assignment after seeing William J. Nolan, then Shimon's best friend but later the man who told Police Chief Robert J. Barrett about Shimon's alleged wire tapping, in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel and deciding that Nolan was spying for Shimon.

Detective Herlihy said he took part for Shimon in wire tapping the phones of Advice, Inc., whose officers included John P. Monroe, from a room in the Gralyn Hotel in January, 1948. He said a recording machine was used for two or three weeks and the recorded conversations were turned over to Shimon.

total would be higher than the items listed above it. Simple as it sounds, that was all there was to it and it went unnoticed for many months. A check would be drawn, Richardson would take it to the bank, cash it, and pocket the difference between the amount of the check and the actual payroll figure.

Hopes to Get New Job

Richardson was released in $10,000 bond after Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson held him for action of the grand jury.

Although Assistant United States Attorney William Glendon said in court that Richardson may have taken between $90,000 and $100,000, he is charged now only with the embezzlement of $2700 on one occasion.

A handsome, husky six-footer, Richardson talked freely to reporters after his arraignment, although he appeared ill at ease.

"I am sorry about it all," he said, "but I am glad it's over with. I would like to get a fresh start and I hope to get a new job."

"Just One of Those Things"

Richardson was asked if debts started his raids on the union funds.

"Perhaps, partly," he answered. "Things got tough for a while. That was it after a while. It was just one of those things. Once it got started you couldn't stop. It just kept going on."

Richardson could account for some of the money—a television set, new furniture, a new Cadillac that he bought for his wife last week.

"Why a Cadillac?" asked one reporter. "Why not a Ford or some less expensive car?"

"Oh, I don't know, no particular reason. I just bought a Cadillac, that's all," said Richardson.

It will be warm and humid over the weekend, cooler Tuesday and Wednesday, the five-day forecast said, with a few showers on Monday with precipitation totaling ¼ to ½ inch.

Yesterday the temperature varied from a low of 70 degrees at 6:15 a. m. to 85 degrees at 3 p. m.

Formosa Needs U. S. Arms But No Troops, Koo Says

(Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune, Inc.

Chinese Communists will invade Formosa within the next three weeks or delay the action for several months, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, said here yesterday.

Koo, just returned from a sixteen-day visit to Formosa, said that in mid-September the 100-mile wide Formosa Strait becomes so rough that large-scale operations would appear impossible, and the rough weather continues until early in the year.

Furthermore, the Ambassador said Chinese Nationalist intelligence reports indicate the Communists do not have a sufficient buildup to launch a full-scale attack.

No United States ground forces are needed for the defense of Formosa, he said, but both General MacArthur and the Pentagon have been supplied with a list of materiel needed by Chiang.

Dr. Koo revealed that Chiang has 200,000 troops on Formosa.

Truman to Accept Resignation of Gibson at Labor

President Truman today will accept the resignation of Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson.

A former CIO official, Gibson has held his post since July, 1946. He first submitted his resignation in March, 1949.

There was no immediate indication whether he will return to private life or take another Government job. He is reported to be a close friend of Mr. Truman and some sources predicted the White House has slated him for a top position in the Nation's emergency defense mobilization.

Do Not Like Being Shot At

GIs Mad for One Big Reason, Wounded Officer Says Here

* * * * * * *

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

(Last of a series)

What's the attitude of the American troops toward the North Koreans?

The Yanks are fighting mad.

Why?

Because the North Koreans invaded South Korea? Or because Joe Stalin & Co. tried to pull off a slick trick? Is it because the integrity of the United Nations was threatened? Because the reputation of the United States was at stake?

Nope. Not at all, according to Second Lieut. Walter A. Kijek, 22, of Manchester, N. H., an infantry platoon leader, shot up in Korea and presently convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital.

The resentment of the GIs against the Red Korean troops is summed up, says Kijek, in a single exclamation!

"Why, the —— —— are shooting at me!"

Kijek, former enlisted man, says that the members of his platoon never stopped to ponder over questions of world politics or ideologies. They were professional soldiers, albeit many of them had never been under fire before, and simply were carrying an assignment.

It Was His Job

"As a matter of fact," said Kijek, "I never stopped to think why I was fighting. It was my job."

The lieutenant emphasized that he was talking for himself, and not for all the GIs in Korea. Nonetheless, he felt sure that the men in his platoon held pretty much the same attitude.

For Kijek, the road from his home town of Manchester, N. H., to Korea ran as follows:

Walter entered St. Anselm's College for a year after finishing high school. Was drafted for a year in the peacetime Army, then went back to college for two years. He quit school after the third year and rejoined the Army, this time with a commission. That was in February of 1949. He was sent to Japan, landed in Korea on the Fourth of July, was wounded on the 19th.

In Space-Time Swap

The wounding occurred on a hill, from which the lieutenant had to withdraw his men in one of those many retreats the first American GIs had to make, in giving up space for time. Lieut. Kijek was bringing up his platoon for the relief of another outfit when he was caught by a machine gun burst. Walter was hugging earth at the time, but still caught three bullets in shoulder, side and leg.

Lieutenant Kijek got a shot of morphine from the "medic," and remained in command until 10 other wounded Yanks could be removed. Then the lieutenant was carried out on a stretcher improvised from a raincoat. The lieutenant's left leg is paralyzed. If it heals, he'll stay in the Army. If not, he return to school and study law.

The blond, blue-eyed, nigh-six-footer, figured—as did his men and the other junior officers—that the first battle with the North Koreans would also be the last.

"I guess we figured the North Koreans would run when they saw us," said Kijek yesterday. "They surprised us and drove us back. We learned the hard way."

Lieutenant Kijek speaks with admiration for his men. They were a fighting bunch—but he takes that for granted.

What aroused his enthusiasm is the fact that his men refused to believe rumors of North Korean atrocities until the evidence—photos of executed GIs—was printed in the Stars and Stripes.

"Then our guys got mad," commented Kijek.

Willingness To Fight Seen As Peace Price

Boston, Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews said tonight the Nation should be willing to pay any price for world peace, even the price of "instituting a war to compel nations to cooperate for peace."

"Self-preservation in the present world can be purchased only by those who are capable of resisting successfully a violation of their rights. We have no choice other than to build our military power to the strength which will make it impossible for any enemy to overcome us. To reach that position, all the resources of the Nation should be dedicated," he said in a speech here.

The Nation first should be ready to ward off any possible attack. He said. ". . . And, reversing the traditional attitude of a democracy, we should boldly proclaim our undeniable objective to be a world at peace.

"To have peace we should be willing, and declare our intention to pay, any price, even the price of instituting a war to compel cooperation for peace."

Matthews said only forces who do not want peace would oppose such efforts to transform the "hostile nations embroiled in the present international conflicts into a tranquil world."

The Bridge Builders

'Love, Love, Love,' Or, 'I Hate You!'

By John Crosby

A MUSICAL bridge, as if everyone didn't know, consists of a few bars of music interspersed between: "All right, Spade, reach!" and the girl at the corner wondering why Mr. Spade hasn't kept his date with her.

WOR in New York has 6000 of these highly descriptive musical bridges in its library and, believe me, it runs the gamut. I've been browsing through some of the 6000 titles which are even more descriptive than the music.

Here's one of the longer ones: "Wistful Yearning, Love is Born and Surges and Surges and Surges; Then in a Pastoral Setting." One of my pets is: "The Old English Countryside but Something is Amiss." Then there's: "Mother, I Feel Lonesome in This Big City," which is followed directly by "A Romp Through the Botanical Gardens" where presumably she has found someone to play with.

WOR specializes in murder, so naturally it has a lusty collection of these bridges. Among the murder bridges are: "There's a Face in the Window;" "Quick! Follow that Car;" "Macabre Running Motor;" "Sneak to Nightmare;" "Twas a Long Dark Night and the Wind . . . etc." and—for the really gruesome one—"Out of the Dark Valley Came Slimey Crawling Things . . . etc." I love that etc. What sort of etcetera do you suppose the composer had in mind?

Naturally, love is dwelt on extensively. The love bridges include: "Girl Doesn't Get Boy," "Love, Love, Love, With Apologies to Tchaikovsky," "Marital Rifts," or "Why Didn't You Tell Me This When We Were Back in Prairie City?" "I Hate You! I Hate You! I Hate You!" And one called "Psuedo Love, Pseudo Kiss" for young couples who are just monkeying around.

The original purpose of bridge music was not so much to change the mood as to change the scene. There are a lot of bridges which are just scene shifters. WOR has one bridge called "Big City," another called "Bigger City." One of its best all-purpose scene-shifting bridges is entitled simply "From Here to There Without Fireworks." Or WOR can get very specific with "Slow Taxicab in a Traffic Jam" or "Coming Out of Waterfall Music."

Sometimes the bridges mix scene and mood at the same time. "Menacing Humor to Racetrack Background," for example. My particular favorite in this line is one called "Light Confusion—and Then Down the Stairs in a Hurry."

Proximity's Owner Reads Her Stock Page

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, AUG. 25 (NYHT).—A big yellow pumpkin moon competed with the floodlights over Roosevelt Raceway. The horses that would race on the evening's program were in the receiving area of the barns or scoring on the track, and one row of stalls was occupied by the entries for the $25,000 American Trotting Championship.

RED SMITH

Harrison Hoyt, the young Connecticut hatter who trains and drives his own string, was fussing around Demon Hanover, the colt he drove to victory in the Hambletonian two years ago. This summer Hoyt and his 1948 champion have made a career of chasing Proximity, the world's richest harness horse, but the fact that they have won only one heat from Ralph Verhurst's great mare has not discouraged Hoyt's neighbors in Bethel, Conn. They were down in a body ready to bet the chimes out of the village clock that this time Demon would slap the lady down.

"I have been criticized," Hoyt confessed, "for teaching those people up there to bet. This year I'm curing them of the habit."

The clamor of the arriving crowd quieted as the National Anthem was played. Far off in the grandstand area, a volunteer patriot bellowed to somebody: "Take your hat off! Stand at attention!" On the track the drivers removed those puffy silk dustcaps and pulled their horses down to a walk.

RALPH VERHURST, who had been scoring Proximity on the practice track beyond the backstretch, returned leading the mare. She is a solid brown with an intelligent head and the high knee-action of a Notre Dame halfback. Her owner is a solid tan with an intelligent head and a prime Flemish accent.

He unhitched Proximity's sulky, removed his own black and red silks, and now he led the mare away again. "Ve got to go someveres," he said. He wore galluses over a white shirt and had a handkerchief tucked into his collar. When he returned he wore a fresh shirt and tie. He had taken the mare along to watch and approve the change.

Verhurst travels with his mare and eats with her and practically lives with her. After breakfast he sits in her stall and reads her the market reports. "Steel up a point, girl," he tells her. "I told you so, girl."

Proximity taught him to read market reports. He was a vinegar-and-pickle tycoon in Victory, N. Y., and when he sold out he turned to trotting, which had occupied part of his attention since boyhood in Belgium, where his father raced. In 1945 he bought Proximity as an unraced 3-year-old for $500.

"She vas bred at Valnut Hall in Kentucky," he said, "and sold for $350 as a yearling to Dr. Scott of Baxter Springs, Kans. They trotted her against the fence (alone against time) in 2:20, no good, and turned her out."

Since then she had won 94 of 186 starts, set seven world speed records, and earned $214,647.67, breaking the 80-year-old record of legendary Goldsmith Maid and stimulating an interest in gilt-edged stocks.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP was the fifth race, with a field of eight. Demon Hanover broke at the start. Hoyt had to pull him down almost a stop to get him back on his gait, and he never had a chance. Clint Hodgins, taking Proximity away from the third post position, sent her to the front and had her on the rail at the clubhouse turn with Chris Spencer behind her.

First time around the half-mile track, it was Proximity, Chris Spencer, Archie Vologda, Full Bloom, Deanna, Guy Paula, Sidney Hanover and Demon Hanover. Going to the far turn again, Chris Spencer moved on the leader and the field telescoped behind him. Proximity moved away slightly but Chris Spencer, winner of this event last year, drove at her again in the home stretch. At the finish, his head was alongside Hodgins' sulky.

For the ninty-fifth time, the girl was a winner. Now her take was $225,897.67. In this, the eighth year of her life, she has raced seventeen times. Once she was disqualified. She was second to Demon Hanover in another heat. She won the other fifteen.

From the stable area, Verhurst hiked up the track toward the finish line, his eyes searching the grandstand area for his son and partner, Gordon, who walked across the track to join him. There were ceremonies and photographs and then the old man walked back toward the barns alone, carrying Hodgins' long buggywhip.

Hodgins took Proximity up the track and came down through the spotlight once more, lifting his cap. The mare had her head turned to the left, away from the crowd. Her eyes were on the tote board where her time showed: 2:03 2/5, and the figures—$2.70, $2.40, 2.20.

Redskins in Unfamiliar Role Of Favorite Over Cardinals

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Aug. 25—Truth being stranger than fiction, today's quirk in the professional football news is the somewhat unbelievable fact that the Washington Redskins are favored to beat the Chicago Cardinals tomorrow night.

The exhibition game starts at 11:45 p. m. Washington time.

It's the first time in a coon's age—five years to be exact that the Redskins have been conceded anything more than an outside chance to deflate the boys from the Windy City. The Skins have won only two of the last five games, both upsets.

The unbeaten Redskins owe their role of 10-point favorites not to their own two-game winning streak or the winless Cardinals' three-game losing streak. An epidemic of injuries plus the fact that the Chicagoans are playing their fourth pre-season skirmish in 11 days make them the underdogs.

Coach Herman Ball of the high-riding Redskins, thinks his team ought to win. Coach Curly Lambeau, who shifted to the Cards this year after 31 seasons with Green Bay, agrees.

Ten of Lambeau's wage-earners are on the casualty list. Most of them will play, but the two who definitely won't are not just guys named Joe. Most important—to the Cardinals and Redskins—is Pat Harder, the bearcat of a fullback, out with a leg injury. The other important nonparticipant is Bob Nussbaumer, former Redskin, who led the league in pass interceptions last year.

He's got a wrenched shoulder and didn't make the trip to Los Angeles Wednesday when the Cards took it on the chin from the Los Angeles Rams.

On the other hand, the Redskins are in tip-top shape. Sammy Baugh had a pulled leg muscle and Harry Gilmer owned a bruished shoulder. Both are O.K., however.

The Redskins scouted the Cardinals against the Rams and even in defeat the Cards impressed the Redskins, especially End Frank Polsfoot, a rookie from Washington State.

He latched on to eight of quarterback Jim Hardy's passes, breaking away with deft feints and speed from three different Ram defenders. "Hotfoot" Polsfoot is definitely hot stuff. His duel with the Redskins' Bones Taylor, who has never failed to score in Denver, should excite the anticipated 20,000 fans.

The usual gang—that's Baugh, Bill Dudley, Harry Dowda and Pete Stout in the backfield and Joe Tereshinski, Bones Taylor, Paul Lipscomb, Larry Niemi, Herb Siegert, John Steber and Al Demao up front—will be in the game most of the way for the Redskins.

IN SHORT—Ball left Los Angeles at 6 this morning to speak at a Quarterback Club luncheon here at noon today. . . . Nick Sebek, the Indiana rookie quarterback who has played only three plays in the two games to date, will get more of a chance tomorrow now that Eddie LeBaron is back in the Marines. . . . Not wishing to have Harry Gilmer's shoulder reinjured, Ball will use Frankie Spaniel at safety instead of Gilmer. . . . This game plus the exhibition against the Detroit Lions in Dallas Wednesday will be the big ones for the nine surplus players who must be cut before September 16. . . . Joe Bartos, late of the Marines, and Eddie Saenz, a four-year Redskin man, are waging a dogfight for one of the right halfback spots. It's an even battle to date. . . . If tomorrow's game follows the pattern of the two previous Redskin games, Dudley will score first. He caught a touchdown pass against the Rams for the first score and booted a field goal against the 49ers to break the 0-0 deadlock. Valuable guy, that Dudley. . . .

Mel Parnell Halts Detroit, Boston Now Trails by 3½

Boston, Aug. 25 (AP).—Boston's onrushing Red Sox, running their winning streak through 11 games, gained a full game on the American League-leading Detroit Tigers tonight by whipping them, 6-2, before a jam-packed crowd of 34,964. The victory, 12th for lefthander Mel Parnell, pulled the fourth place Sox within 3½ games of Detroit.

Al Zarilla's two-run triple was the big blow in the eighth inning attack.

The Tigers tied it up in the fifth and Walt Dropo's single, punched through the middle, scored the tie breaker in the Boston sixth.

Billy Goodman began the Sox three-run splurge in the eighth with a sinking line drive to right on which Johnny Groth made a great pickup stop, holding the majors' leading batter to a single. Vern Stephens drew a walk, only the third of the game by Trout who was replaced by Hank Borowy. Dropo flied out deep to right, allowing Goodman to take third.

Bob Doerr bunted neatly and reached first on the sacrifice as Goodman beat first baseman Don Kolloway's toss to the plate. Zarilla then crashed his three bagger to right for two runs.

Redskins' Niemi Classified 1-A

Denver, Colo., Aug. 25.—Laurie Niemi, regular offensive and defensive tackle of the Washington Redskins, today was designated as "available for immediate induction" into the Army.

The 25-year-old former University of Washington star received the news shortly after the team arrived here. He plans to file a dependency appeal inasmuch as he helps support his father and mother.

Don Newcombe Hurls Dodgers To 9th in Row

Cincinnati, Aug. 25 (AP).—Don Newcombe's sharp-fielding teammates helped him zero the Cincinnati Reds, 6-0, tonight as the Brooklyn Dodgers galloped on to their ninth straight win. Jackie Robinson and Pee Wee Reese homered for the Brooks and aided in the Dodgers' three double plays.

Cincinnati got only two men to third. Lloyd Merriman in the fourth on two singles and a double play and Grady Hatton getting there via two singles.

Stranahan Extended But Gains Finals

Minneapolis, Aug. 25 (AP).—Sam Urzetta, the job hunting collegian from Rochester, N. Y., and Frank Stranahan, the unemployed millionaire from Toledo, will play tomorrow for the National Amateur golf crown.

Stranahan played hot and cold golf today to eliminate John Ward of Clay, N. Y., 1 up, while Urzetta was as steady as a rock in sending Robert Knowles of Brookline, Mass., to the sidelines, 6 and 5.

Surprisingly, it was Stranahan, the British amateur champion and the prohibitive favorite here, who had to hustle for his victory in the 36-hole semifinals over the 6655 yards and the 108 traps that make up the Minneapolis Golf Club course.

The Ohioan pushed two shots out of bounds on the third hole of the morning round and never got ahead of the gum-chewing lawyer from Syracuse until the eighth hole of the afternoon.

Urzetta, on the other hand, lost the first hole by sending his second shot over the green. He took the second to pull even with the great-grandson of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and then steadily moved ahead.

The two will begin their duel for the title Charles Coe of Oklahoma relinquished last Wednesday, at 10:30 a. m. (EST) tomorrow. The second 18 holes start at 3 p. m. (EST).

Cards Whip Giants, 7 to 4

St. Louis, Aug. 25 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals, on the brink of the second division, beat the New York Giants, 7-4, tonight in a free-swinging contest in which the Redbirds collected 13 hits, the Giants 12. Al Brazle, in relief for the Cardinals, allowed only two hits in five and one-third innings to get credit for the victory.

Wild Pitch, Konstanty's Hit Decide It

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25 (AP).—A wild pitch by Ptticher Cliff Chambers and a single by Relief Hurler Jim Konstanty in the fifteenth gave the fighting Philadelphia Phillies two runs for a 9-7 win over the last-place Pittsburgh Pirates tonight.

Chambers pitched fine relief ball from the seventh until the fifteenth. Willie Jones opened with a double and Granny Hamner was passed intentionally. Chambers then got Mike Goliat on an outfield fly, Jones racing to third.

With Konstanty at the plate, Chambers uncorked his wild pitch and Jones scored with Hamner going to third. Then Konstanty singled to score Hamner. Eddie Waitkus ended the inning with a long fly.

Cleveland Romps On Lions, 35-14

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Cleveland Browns rolled to their third National League exhibition professional football victory tonight, 35-14, over the Detroit Lions.

The Clevelanders, who dominated the All-America Conference for the four years before it merged with the National League, scored three touchdowns in the first period and coasted in. Quarterback Otto Graham passed for two Cleveland touchdowns and ran another over on a quarterback sneak. Marion Motley scored on a 41-yard run and Rex Bumgardner ran over for other T. D.

Sedgman Tops Brown To Virtually Clinch Title

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, Aug. 25 (AP).—Black disaster struck America's tennis forces today when two brilliant Australian youngsters beat the daylights out of the best this country could summon and virtually clinched the Davis cup before the challenge round had well begun.

Ken McGregor, a 20-year-old wizard from down under, pulled one of the great upsets of cup history by blasting the veteran Ted Schroeder off the courts, 13—11, 6—3, 6—4.

His 22-year-old teammate, Frank Sedgman, banged across another straight set victory over Tom Brown, jr., 6—0, 8—6, 9—7, before 8,000 unbelieving spectators in the big horseshoe stadium.

When the last shot had been fired on black Friday, the cup defenders were left with little or no hope of retaining the trophy they have held since they brought it back from Australia in 1946.

All the wildly celebrating Aussies will need do is capture tomorrow's doubles match to make it official.

Today Ted not only met his match, but his master in a 190-pound six-foot-three athlete who covered court like the dew and exhibited one of the biggest services seen in years. Schroeder, though playing near his best, succeeded in breaking McGregor's serve only once, and that at the very outset.

McGregor, whose selection by Capt. Harry Hopman to play the singles came as a great surprise yesterday, served 16 clean aces to Schroeder's 11 and knocked 49 placements to Ted's 38.

Sedgman was expected to defeat Brown unless the San Francisco Barrister struck one of the unbeatable streaks of tennis for which he was noted three or four years ago.

Both captains said they would stick with their previously announced doubles teams in tomorrow's match, starting at 1:30 (EST). Schroeder and Gardnar Mulloy were down to tackle Sedgman and John Bromwich, who only last week won the national doubles title at Brookline, Mass.

Lose Two More

Nats Now Do What Comes NAT-urally

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The losing streak of the Nats grew to seven last midnight as the Chicago White Sox struck them down, 6-1 and 10-5, in a twi-night doubleheader before 3643 fans at Griffith Stadium.

Ken Holcombe, a National League castoff, and winner of only two other games all year, beat them on a nine-hitter in the first game. Al Sima gave up all of Chicago's runs in the first five innings, and then he was lifted for Jim Pearce.

In the second game, Luis Aloma, one of the rare Cuban ball players not on Washington's payroll, came out of the bullpen in the fifth inning to stop the Nats cold, and chalk up his sixth victory against two losses. Aloma's countryman, Chico Marrero, was tagged with his ninth loss against five wins.

Margin Cut to 3½

The double setback cut the Nats' lead over Chicago in the race for fifth place to 3½ games. Two weeks ago, the Nats' lead was eight games.

The Sox scored their first game runs in clusters of three after two were out in the third and fifth innings.

In the third inning, singles by Nelson Fox and Chico Carrasquel and a walk to Phil Masi loaded the bases with two down. Eddie Robinson singled in two runs, and Gus Zernial brought in the third with a single.

With two down and nobody on in the fifth, they exploded for three more. Walks to Masi and Robinson, a one-run single by Zernial and Majeski's two-run double wound up the scoring.

Pearce Good in Relief

Pearce came on in the sixth inning for Washington and he turned in four innings of two-hit shutout ball. But the best the Nats could do for him was stir up a lone run in the eighth on an infield single by Eddie Yost, bunt singles by Gil Coan and Irv Noren and Ed Stewart's long fly.

Cleanup-hitter Sam Mele had a horrible first game. In four trips to the plate, he left eight runners stranded.

Chicago warmed up on Marrero in the second game with two unearned runs in the third inning. After the Nats tied it up in the third, the Sox went to town in the fourth. They sent six runs across the plate before Manager Bucky Harris could get Chico out of the line of fire.

Trailing by 8-2, the Nats rocked Chisox starter Billy Pierce for three runs in the fifth, and they had the bases loaded with Eddie Yost coming up. Chicago Manager Red Corriden waved Pierce out, and beckoned Aloma in from the bullpen to save the situation.

Aloma Too Sweet

That's exactly what Luis did. He worked the count to 3 and 2 on Yost, and, with all the Nats running, he induced the Nats' third baseman to hoist a fly to Leftfielder Gus Zernial.

Aloma shut 'em out the rest of the way and the Sox pecked away at Mickey Harris for their last two runs.

The Sox's two runs in the third came on Carrasquel's single, Johnny Ostrowski's two-base wild throw, Al Evans error on a throw

Ray Robinson Scores Quickie

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 25 (AP).—Sugar Ray Robinson knocked out Jose Basora tonight in less than a minute to defend successfully his middleweight championship Pennsylvania version.

It was one of the fastest knockouts in championship history. Referee Johnny Kelly counted the Puerto Rican contender out in 52 seconds.

Basora was knocked down four times in the fast and furious action.

The Harlem Sugar weighed in at 154¾; Basora at 159¾. Basora was badly hurt. Dr. Leonard Freda of the State Athletic Commission worked over him for 6 or 7 minutes before he was permitted to leave the ring.

The crowd of some 5000 which began to boo and yell "fix" quieted suddenly when it realized the Puerto Rican was hurt.

Dr. Freda said Basora may have suffered an ear puncture but the Puerto Rican was able to navigate shortly after the knockout.

to the plate, and singles by Fox and Floyd Baker.

Ostrowski atoned for his error with a two-run triple in the third, scoring Michaels and Mele.

Then the Chisox went on their six-run stampede. A walk, Mele's error and Carrasquel's single filled the bases. Gus Niarhos singled home two runs. Pierce squeezed in the third. Baker doubled home the fourth, and Dave Philley singled in Nos. 5 and 6. That was the ball game.

IN SHORT—Ladies Day will be revived at Griffith Stadium this afternoon, and handsome Gene Bearden (2-6) will do the pitching for Washington against Chicago's Bill Wight (8-12) . . . Bob Kuzava was scheduled to pitch the twilight half of last night's doubleheader, but a few hours before game time, he was called home to Wyandotte, Mich., where his five-year-old son is seriously ill . . . The Nats have called up another Cuban, Carlos Pascual, short chunky infielder-outfielder-pitcher from their Class B farm at Big Spring, Tex., of the Big State League. Nicknamed "Potato," Pascuale was batting .346 and won seven against two losses as a pitcher. He'll report next week.

Electron's Test Bares Stimulant

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 25.—An alleged doping case was revealed here just before the start of today's eighth race when stewards ordered the scratching of C. H. Lamparter's Ardashir from the event.

Owner-trainer Lamparter was then suspended, along with all horses in his charge because a test showed a stimulant drug "of the nature of amphetamine" had been used on Electron, winner of yesterday's first race. The ruling read "the case has been referred to the Maryland Racing Commission."

Electron was a $14.40 shot when he survived a photo finish to win. An 8-year-old gelding, Electron had not raced previously since July 1, 1949, at Delaware Park.

Chief Steward Joseph Flanagan said the urine analysis was made following the race. No date has been set for the hearing before the commission.

The day's racing was featured by the victory of Love Me Now, 3-2 favorite, in the Conowingo Purse. The gelding won by 2½ lengths over the 12-1 shot, Heaven Hill, and it was the 15th win of Apprentice Anthony Russo in his nine days at the track.

Senate Committee Approves Action on Eastern Stadium Bill

Although Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, didn't exactly plump for it, the Senate District Committee yesterday approved a bill to provide for lights at Eastern High Stadium.

The measure, already passed by the House, authorizes $50,000 to expand the stadium and light it. The Senate committee took out language to increase seating capacity to 10,000, and left the bill saying the stadium should be enlarged "to the extent possible."

Dr. Corning's hesitance to give all-out approval, he explained, was because the Board of Education is committed to construction of a new stadium with lights for Coolidge High School. The sum of $400,000 will be asked for it in the 1952 budget.

Dr. Corning said the Board of Education approved the bill for Eastern High with the qualification that it did so if the bill wouldn't interfere with the Coolidge plan.

Senator Matthew B. Neely (D., W. Va.), committee chairman, finally asked after a lot of discussion, "Are you for this bill or not?"

Dr. Corning replied, "You're putting me on the spot."

Neely retorted, "It's getting late in the day and doesn't make any difference to me whether or not you're on the spot. Answer yes or no."

Dr. Corning reiterated, "All I'm authorized to say is that this would be fine if it wouldn't interefere with getting a complete stadium for Coolidge."

The superintendent earlier said, "No doubt there is need for improvements and for a lighted stadium. Washington is almost alone in not having night facilities for its schools."

The Senate group approved the bill for action on the floor after listening to a strong recommendation for it from Dr. Allen S. Cross, 1241 Pennsylvania ave. se., president of the Eastern High Alumni Association.

Dr. Cross said he was all for the Coolidge proposal but urged action on the Eastern improvements now. The bill would stimulate interest in athletics and would be self-liquidating, Dr. Cross contended.

Senator Lester C. Hunt, (D., Colo.) said, "I'm going to support this. It's just almost a disgrace that the city of Washington with 10 high schools doesn't have a lighted stadium."

Tom Bradford Wins Junior

Bassler's 69 Tops Pros at Columbia

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Baltimore's Charley Bassler demonstrated verily, that the last shall be first, when as the fag-ender in the field of 170 golfers, he brought in the day's only sub-par round to win the pro sweepstakes at Columbia Country Club yesterday.

The Rolling Road pro, last man to finish, slogged in with a one-under 69 to beat his fellow townsman, Walter Romans, by a stroke in the pro division of the tournament.

Over a course made slow by rains, Bassler whipped a field that included Washington's nationally-famed pair of George Fazio and Lew Worsham. Fazio finished in a two-way tie for seventh with a 73, after his adventures with a fourteenth-hole trap cost him a seven on the par four hole.

Worsham, in town for a one-day shot at the pro sweeps, took a 37-40—77 to finish out of the money.

Washingtonians monopolized the top spots in the Am-Pro. Bill Crabbe, assistant pro at Rock Creek, and Fred Chaimson, of Prince Georges, put together a best-ball 64, six under par, to tie Dewey Ricketts, assistant Manor pro, and W. F. McCarty of the same club, for first.

Bethesda's Harry Griesmer and George Winkler tied Walt Romans and Mike Mills of Baltimore Country Club for third. Each had 66s.

Kenwood's Cliff Kohlman shot one of the best rounds of his life, a 39-39—78, which combined with his 11 handicap, gave him a winning 67 in the amateur sweepstakes. Bob Chandler of Prince Georges made it a banner day for the locals, winning low gross with 35-37—72.

Cubs Beat Braves in Ninth On Roy Smalley's Single, 7-6

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP).—A ninth-inning double by Hank Sauer, plus Roy Smalley's single scoring the winning run, gave the Chicago Cubs a 7-6 victory over the Boston Braves today with two out in the ninth inning.

Sauer, who smashed his twenty-second and twenty-third home runs of the season, drove in four of the seven Cub runs. Hal Jeffcoat scored for him in the ninth after Sauer had doubled.

Leonard's 66 Leads Tourney

Montreal, Aug. 25 (AP).—Stan Leonard of Vancouver shot a record-breaking six-under-par 66 today at the halfway mark in the Canadian Open Golf championship.

Only Big Jim Ferrier of San Francisco could give the Vancouver Marine Drive Club professional a real argument.

Next closest figure was 138, shared by Ed Furgol of Royal Oak, Mich., and Len Harman, the little Knowlton, Que., pro who shot a 67 yesterday.

At 140 came a trio of Americans—Gene Kunes of Cleveland, who won the Canadian Open in 1935 at Montreal Summer Lea with 280; Jerry Barber of Philadelphia and the veteran Bobby Cruickshank of Pittsburgh, who shot a 68 yesterday and added a par-72 today.

In the same threesome with Leonard and Fred Hawkins of El Paso was Sam Snead. A 73 of yesterday was stacked against him and the best Slamming Sam could do today was a two-under-par 70.

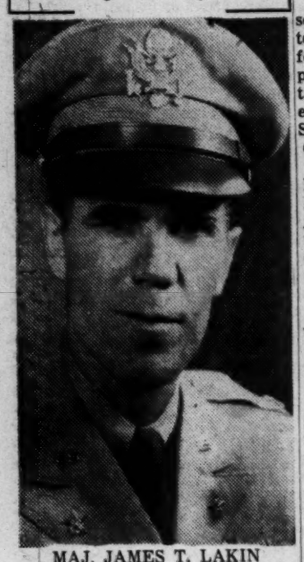
Gun Blasts Badly Wound Army Major



MAJ. JAMES T. LAKIN

Depressed by financial worries and the possibility of war with Russia, an army major riddled himself with slugs with a 9 mm. German "burp" gun early yesterday in his Arlington, Va., apartment.

He is Maj. James T. Lakin, 36, of 818 S. Florida st., Magnolia Gardens, congressional liaison officer for the office of the Army Chief of Staff. He is in critical condition at Arlington Hospital.

The shooting took place in the living room at about 5 a.m. Police said Lakin, completely nude, suddenly went to a closet, removed the "burp" gun, similar to the American "tommy" gun, and shot himself. His wife, Evelyn, was sitting in a chair across the room. Their two sons, James, 9, and Martin, 6, were asleep in an adjoining bedroom.

Neighbor Paid Visit

According to Arlington Detective Walter Kadel, a neighbor, Charles C. Tevis, had spent the evening with the Lakins, during which between 10 and 15 cans of beer were consumed.

Kadel said Mrs. Lakin told him the two men quarreled and there was a scuffle between them. They parted on friendly terms, she added.

Tevis said he heard a burst of shots about 15 minutes after he left the apartment and rushed upstairs from his own apartment to find the major on the floor, blood welling from his wounds.

Mrs. Lakin told Kadel their financial situation had become desperate, that they had to hock the furniture and she was planning to return to work to help out. She said also that her husband was depressed because he lost a suit recently in Los Angeles involving his claim on some mining property.

Talked About the War

Tevis said they spent the evening together "listening to records on the record player and talking—mostly about people and the war."

Tevis, who is 30 and who has known the Lakins for about a year, said the major was "awfully despondent about the war." He said the scuffle began after Lakin said he "thought the Russians were coming right away, and I told him he was full of baloney." Tevis said he and Lakin had been "clowning around and were feeling pretty good."

A native of Salt Lake City, Lakin was an artillery officer in Europe during World War II, where he won the Bronze Star. He was released from active duty in 1946 but was returned to active duty in September, 1948, as liaison man on Capitol Hill.

The action came after Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), spoke before their annual assembly, charging that "many" newspapers "have been trying to prejudice the public against the common man."

Declaring that "there are still some reputable newspapers," Senator Papper said that his recent defeat in the Florida Democratic primary was largely due to "antagonism and unfairness" of several newspaper publishers in that State.

Charges Misuse of Power

"A newspaper published usually has to be a millionaire," he declared. "He has power to prejudice the little fellow, and sometimes that power is used. I know of instances where newspapers tried to make labor organizers seem to be public enemies."

The remark brought laughs and cheers from the 400 delegates attending yesterday's closing session of the 92d annual convention of the International Typographical Uion, at Hotel Mayflower.

The ITU-passed resolution on free speech was a substitute one prepared by the organization's resolutions committee for another which bitterly assailed Communist propaganda activities in the United States. The original one asked that the ITU call on the President and the FBI "to arrest and confine all advocates of Red Fascism for the duration. . ."

Asks Home Rule for D.C.

Another resolution asked "the restoration of home rule and suffrage for residents of the District of Columbia." It was introduced and vigorously pushed by Jesse B. Manbeck, a Washington Post proof reader.

The home-rule resolution urged that House members be asked officially by the ITU to sign the pending petition which would bring the plan to the House floor.

Several other resolutions asking that ITU headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind., be transferred to Washington, were readily defeated by voice votes.

Finance Report Approved

A majority of the delegates, by voice vote, upheld the finance committee's report that organization expenses were adequately accounted for in the year's audit, despite the dissent of one of the auditors, Albert H. Edwards.

Auditor Edwards had charged in his minority report that some $341,843 in strike defense funds sent to ITU locals was insufficiently detailed. Delegates backing Edwards pointed out that he had not charged dishonesty or squandering union funds, that he simply asked a more detailed accounting.

The finance committee report listed the union assets at $18,224,589. The union has a membership of more than 90,000.

Stars and Bars Wave Proudly At Amphitheater

They planted the Confederate Stars and Bars en masse in the Nation's Capital.

The Richmond delegation, led by Mayor Nelson T. Parker and City Manager Sherwood Redder, attended the performance of Paul Green's pageant, "Faith of Our Fathers," in the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater. The performance was preceded by a massing of colors predominately those of the South.

Longshoremen Tighten Boycott on Red Cargoes

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Port of New York longshoremen tightened their boycott against Russian and satellite cargoes today in protect against Communist aggression in Korea.

The district council of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association, controlling all stevedoring in the port, announced there would be no further loading or unloading of Russian goods.

Minstrel Burl Ives Thrills Fans on Washington Visit

Wayfarin' Burl Ives, singer of folk songs, came to the Disc Shop, 1623 Connecticut ave. nw., for an hour yesterday afternoon and his admirers flocked in like blue-tail flies.

The situation can best be described as a mild and genteel pandemonium—genteel because no one broke anything and everyone was polite.

One 3-year-old admirer brought her hero a single rose all the way from Arlington.

Candor compels it to be said that the flower was a little wilted, but the minstrel with the handsome curly beard accepted the gift proffered by the chubby fist and jauntily tucked it in his buttonhole.

Said one little boy, who had evidently seen Burl Ives in the movies, "Gee, Mr. Ives, I never thought I'd see you alive!"

There were other "gees," too, as Ives autographed albums and was questioned by Bill Carmichael in an interview broadcast over WQQW. On hand, also, was Warde Donovan, who plays the romantic lead in "Knickerbocker Holiday," which concludes a week's run at the Olney Theater Sunday night.

Ives plays the role of Gov. Peter Stuyvesant in the show.

In and around people, Ives, who in years gone by was a boy evangelist, managed to answer a couple of questions.

Why does he wear a beard? Started this one about three years ago, but he wore a shorter one before a spell of going clean-shaven.

What are his most popular records? In order—"Blue Tail Fly," "The Big Rock Candy Mountain" and "The Foggy, Foggy Dew."

And, oh yes, "Animal Fair," which, according to a Columbia sales representative, is the company's best-selling phonograph album for juveniles. Another album just released is devoted to Mother Goose songs by the man who has sung his way into thousands of homes.

Westerns Conceal Some Weird Lines

By Richard L. Coe

YOU WILL, perhaps, not be the slightest bit interested in learning that I have just overcome a serious occupational hazard.

Still, it means a great deal to me, and, as a Western-chocked year wears along, it well may to you. Thanks to a laggard spirit and a burned-out alarm clock, I arrived yesterday somewhere in the middle of "The Return of Jesse James" at the Columbia.

This is against all reviewing codes, and I've frequently chided folks on coming in on a movie after the picture's been rolling a while. "You don't read a book that way," I always smugly observe. It's never done any good, for I'm forever bunching my frame together to let a movie latecomer shuffle into his seat. But, about Westerns, it seems, I've been wrong all these years. From now on punctuality can go hang its chaste head when I'm bound for a Western.

The first line I heard, in M. Lippert's setting of a Missouri town of the '70s, was, "My brother is operating under the compulsion of a fixed idea."

Wow!

If it had been a Park ave. psychiatric office or a lady's satin daybed, the line would have been easy to place. But here we were, my Columbia companions and I, shoved into 1950 thought terms when it was the name of Jesse James that had lured us into the theater.

So there I was, right up against un idee fixe, and somewhere along the line I learned that Jesse James had been shot in the back—and presumably killed—six months before, but everyone is afraid of John Ireland, because they think he's Jesse.

What I'm trying to say is that by getting into a Western AFTER it's begun, you can play a great game with yourself figuring all sorts of things. Granted, it's a simple game and you've probably discovered it for yourself years ago, but old Conscientious Coe has just latched on to it and, from the looks of the Westerns blowing this way for the next six months, it seems the ideal solution to watching a Western and at the same time being entertained rather than drugged.

I don't think there's much out of the ordinary, except that hangnail psychiatric line, though a case might be made for the character Ann Dvorak is playing. She's a mean one right to the very end, and it all goes to prove that both crime and card-playing women can sure lead a man into a peck of trouble.

THE ARENA THEATER seems to be doing, at last, what the old Washington Civic Theater hoped to do, though it's still a bit early to tell whether the luck will hold . . . At all events, the resident company, now playing "She Stoops to Conquer" in central staging, is having some sold-out houses that indicate real community support . . . Managing Director Edward Mangum reports a steady demand for seats and there's general curiousity about central staging around town . . . There's a matinee today and already there are only a few seats left in the small house for early next week . . . More about this after I've caught up with it.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT has signed to costar with Muriel Rahn in "The Barrier," which will play a week's run at the Gayety beginning September 25 . . . This is Michael Myerberg's production of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz musical, bound for a New York run . . . As previously announced, Celeste Holm will open the Gayety season the week of September 18 in Louis Verneuil's comedy about Washington, "Affairs of State." . . . With those two bookings, the Gayety seems well ready to launch its first full season as Washington's successor to the National.

ANOTHER GAYETY - BOUND production has just grossed a remarkable $73,000 in two weeks at San Francisco's Curran Theater . . . This is "Lost in the Stars," the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical starring Todd Duncan, which will arrive here in mid-December . . . A tightly-scheduled tour will take the Playwrights Co. offering across the country, which means it's unlikely the one-week stand here will be extended.

THE BARTER THEATER Monday night starts the third week of its annual drama festival; "Claudia" is the play. . . . Other Abingdon performances the tourists will find include "The Vinegar Tree" and "The Male Animal," the latter scheduled for the Labor Day weekend, Friday and Saturday.

JOHN C. BECHER, who's doing such a nice job, as he always seems to do, with Burl Ives in Olney's "Knickerbocker Holiday," will get feature billing when ZaSu Pitts arrives next week after next in "Post Road." . . . Becher's made an individual of each of his parts this summer. . . . You've seen him as the stage-struck Shriner in "Light Up the Sky," the colonel in "Over 21," the taxi driver in "Harvey" and Uncle William in "The Devil's Disciple." . . . And they've all been ably delivered, so the future billing is fair reward.

THE CROSS ROADS Theater announces that it will continue its "Three Men on a Horse" for the third week. . . . In the cast of the John Cecil Holm comedy are George Grizzard, Tim Kelley, Jim Little, Dick O'Neill, May Leisinger, Don Hopkins, Pat Smith, John Miles, Harlow Weller, Mary Wills, Dennis Marshall and Lloyd Burningame. . . . Performances at the Virginia Farm theater are nightly except Sundays and Mondays.

Youngsters, Here to Be Seen and Heard, Pick Flaws in Adults

Teen-Agers Gather For Parley; Demand More Say in World

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

THAT phenomenon known as an "adult" yesterday was laid out under Kleig lights on the surgical table, dissected, psychoanalyzed and in general taken apart from here to 23 Skidoo and back again.

The major operation was performed by a youthful platoon dedicated to the proposition that teen-agers are human beings.

Three-score strong, they gathered from all sections of the land at the Federal Security Agency to make plans for the White House Conference on Children and Youth here in December.

That fact in itself marked an upheaval. The conferences, started by Teddy Roosevelt, heretofore have been adult affairs. Oddly enough, someone decided youth might have something to contribute to a Conference on Youth.

The teen-agers brandished no chips on their shoulders. But they did fly bold banners, aimed at wiping out the aphorism that "Children should be seen and not heard."

"We don't want to do away with adults entirely," one teen-ager admitted.

BUT SHORT of that the youthful surgeons made it plain they would be happy to see the grownups mend their ways.

For one thing they wish parents would stop saying, "I still maintain when I was your age . . ."

One teen-ager related how she had had a major campaign on her hands convincing her family to l[et] her decorate one of the rooms in the house.

"I'm a[n] amateur painter and I wanted to do it. Well, finally, they gave in. And when I had finished they loved the way I did the room. But that was a battle I had to win."

THEY DON't believe parents should set strict rules that a son or daughter should be in at eleven, or twelve, every night regardless of the occasion.

"A young person is just like a spring," explained DiAnne Mathre, 18, of Urbana, Ill. "If you restrain a spring then let it go all at once, why . . . it just shoots up out of control with suppressed energy."

PREJUDICE wears many faces.

The teen-agers came to do battle on that form of it which holds that all the world is divided into two parts—adults to run things, young people to be run.

They want representation on, say, a playground board of directors.

"All the graduation speakers say we're the hope of the country—if that's the case then they ought to give us experience in helping run things," logically pointed out 16-year-old Janice Lea Holm, of 4869 Twenty-eighth st. S., Arlington.

"We don't want to be rubber stamps," said another 16-year-old, Stefan Anderson, of Madison Wisc. "Adults have a tendency to regard us as babies. We're not babies."

"I DON'T think adults listen to us enough," said Edmund Smallwood, 18, of 336 Fourteenth st. ne., Washington. They say, 'We can like it or lump it.' They shouldn't say that."

Miss Mathre, was a Quiz Kid. And she was chosen as the outstanding 4-H Club girl in the country in citizenship work.

Mary Leta Gilbert, 16, of Vienna, Ga., is national historian of the Future Homemakers of America, besides being a beauty queen.

Most go to school. Some, like Helen McIntire, 19, of Washington, work—Helen has a job with a wholesale drug firm.

They came armed with weapons of 3.5-bazooka quality: The fact that many leaders of our Republic's founding days were very young. They brought devastating logic, e. g.:

"WHO else knows the problems of young people better than young people?" asked Seldon Kruger, 19, of Newark, N. J.

Many efforts were made to define "the kind of adult young people like."

Someone defined him: "Can't be too high up but can't come down too far."

The best definition seemed to be: "Being able to talk with a person—that is a good adult."

The teen-agers admitted young people sometimes go too far in judgment of their elders: "Some young people consider anyone past 30 as just out to hamper their efforts."

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

House Move Due Today To Give Truman Power To Appoint, Transfer

A move is slated to be made in the House today to give the President authority to make appointments, transfers, and promotions in the Federal service on a temporary basis.

A rider to the 16-billion-dollar supplemental money bill as recommended by the House Appropriations Committee would require the Government to make personnel transactions on a temporary basis beginning September 1. The Administration is fighting it as unnecessary at this time, insisting the President should be given the power to use at his discretion.

Meantime, a new rider added to the money bill by the committee would give the Defense Department authority to call on other Federal agencies to supply it with workers. How it could be made effective was not explained.

Another provision in the bill says: "The names of all persons to be terminated under reductions in force in the departments and agencies of the Government shall be certified as eligible for appointment to positions in agency programs determined by the President to be related directly to national defense, if qualified, at not to exceed the grade and salary last held in the terminating agency or department."

The Civil Service Commission would attempt to do this anyway. Its policy is to try to place employes laid off in one agency in another. The provision that would "freeze" salaries and grades of transferred employes is something new, however.

Incidentally, the committee rider to make personnel transactions temporary after September 1 would have no effect on the proposed order by the President to make those nonstatus employes who have at least two years of service eligible for permanent jobs, Civil Service experts believe. But others aren't so sure. They say it would depend on how the rider is interpreted. In-grade promotions definitely wouldn't be stopped by the rider.

House Approves $14 Million D. C. Airport Measure

Authorization Bill Sent to Senate; $2,150,000 Asked To Purchase Land

By voice vote the House yesterday authorized a new 14 million dollar airport for Greater Washington.

First, however, on a roll-call vote, the House rejected, 226 to 124, a motion to recommit the bill.

The House action sent the bill back to the Senate, where its leading sponsor, Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), said he would probably ask the Senate to agree with the House amendments rather than delay the measure by sending it to conference.

The measure is an authorization only. The 14 million dollars will have to be voted in a separate bill.

New Appropriation Asked

Late yesterday, after the House had passed the authorization bill, President Truman asked Congress for a new appropriation of $2,150,000 to acquire land for the new airport.

It is expected that the airport will be located in Virginia, probably in Fairfax County near Annandale. It will cover nearly 4000 acres.

Proponents of the bill argued that National Airport is now "strained beyond capacity" and even if the Air Force and the Navy moved out of Bolling and Anacostia the capacity of National Airport could not be increased.

The Maryland House delegation opposed the bill, arguing that Baltimore's new Friendship Airport could serve as an alternate to National Airport.

Except for Representative J. Glenn Beall (R.), who did not vote, the entire Maryland delegation of six voted to recommit the bill.

Only two members of Virginia's nine-member delegation voted to recommit. They were Representative Edward J. Robeson, jr. (D.) and Representative J. Vaughan Gary (D.).

Seven Favor Motion

The roll-call vote to recommit the bill showed 13 members of the House District Committee against returning the bill to committee, 7 favoring the motion and 5 not voting.

Voting not to recommit were Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), committee chairman; Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.), Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.), Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), Representative Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.), Representative Monroe M. Redden (D. N. C.) Representative Paul C. Jones (D. Mo.) Representative Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.), Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), Representative John J. Allen, jr. (R., Calif.), and Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.).

Voting to recommit were Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), Representative Robert E. Jones, jr. (D., Ala.), Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), Representative Sid Simpson (R., Ill.), Representative Henry O. Talle (R., Iowa), Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) and Representative Benjamin F. James (R., Pa.).

House District Committee members who did not vote were Beall, Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.), Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) and Representative James H. Morrison (D, La.).

Ten-year-old Robert Hill, who fractured his skull when he ran into a moving truck August 19, died at Casualty Hospital yesterday, becoming the District's forty-second traffic death of 1950.

Police said young Hill, who lived at 4700 Meade st. ne., was playing with a group of boys in the 1400 block of Kenilworth st. ne., and ran out from between two parked cars into the rear side of a truck.

Deputy District Coroner Christopher J. Murphy ruled the death accidental. No charges were placed against the driver.

Kenneth Walker, 3, 642 Hobart pl. nw., was in critical condition at Freedman's Hospital last night after being struck by a car operated, police said, by Mrs. Beatrice T. Chisolm, 55, 234 Channing st. ne.

Police said Kenneth darted into Hobart st. from between parked cars. He suffered lacerations to the head and a possible fractured skull. No charges were made.

Plasterers' Tenders End Their Strike

Striking plasterers' tenders will return to work Monday morning with an immediate pay increase of 8 cents an hour, it was announced last night.

Termination of the strike, which began August 15 when more than 400 members of Local 571, Plasterers' Tenders' Union walked out, was announced jointly by Francis J. Kelly, an attorney, representing the Employing Plasterers' Association, and Leo Nazdin, representing the tenders.

In addition to the immediate hourly increase from $1.85 to $1.93, the settlement provides: effective March 1, 1951, an additional increase of 7 cents per hour; on August 1, 1951, establishment by the employers of a welfare fund to which they will contribute 10 cents per man hour.

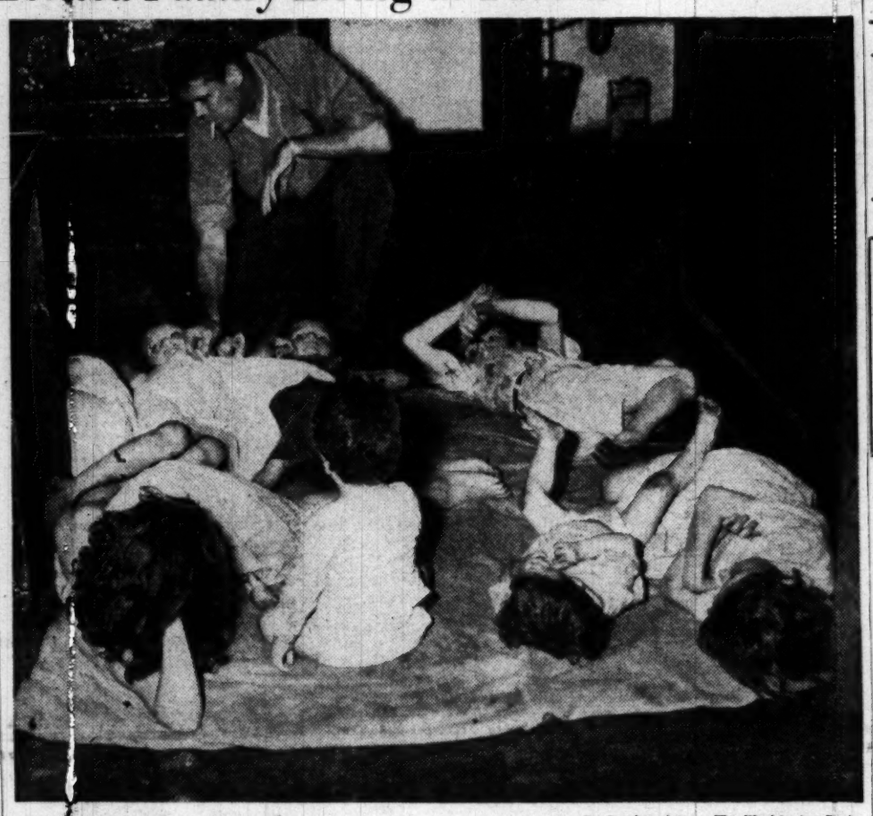
Evicted Family Living in Tavern



By Joe Armstrong—The Washington Post

SLEEPING ON FLOOR—Wilfred A. Corbin, father of nine children who were evicted from their home, is shown with eight of his children who are sleeping on the floor in front of the bar in his tavern, closed to business. The Corbins fell two months behind in the rent of their three-bedroom home at 310 E. Glebe rd., Alexandria

At the moment, Corbin's wife, Lena, is in Alexandria Hospital, where she gave birth to her ninth child, a girl, on Tuesday.

After the eviction the Corbin family lived with friends. About a week ago, Mrs. Corbin's sister in Fredericksburg, Va., agreed to care for the children until the family obtained new housing.

On Tuesday, Corbin had to rush his wife to the hospital. Then, on Thursday, came an urgent message from Fredericksburg: The relatives taking care of the children had to go to North Carolina because of sickness in the family; Corbin would have to pick up his children.

Corbin drove to Fredericksburg and returned to Alexandria with his children at 12:15 a. m. yesterday. There was no place else to take them, so he borrowed some blankets from a cousin and bedded down the children on the floor of the tavern.

The children spent the entire day playing in the tavern, which Corbin closed to business. The 17-month-old twins, George and Charles, napped at intervals on cases of canned beer.

The other children are Woodrow, 2; Jimmie, 4; Helena, 6; Regina, 7; Bernard, 9, and Hazel, 11.

By 5 p. m. yesterday the situation had brightened—a little. The combined energies of friends, relatives, the Alexandria Welfare Department and the city's juvenile court officers resulted in temporary quarters for all of the children.

And it is planned that Mrs. Corbin and her new child will go to her mother's home at Manassas, Va., when she leaves the hospital.

Corbin, who has operated the beer tavern at Patrick and Oronoco sts. for the past seven years, said he will get a room temporarily.

Because of a decline in business and the impact of hospital expenses, Corbin feels he can afford to pay no more than $75 a month for a new home.

Writer Denies Calling League Of Women Voters Partisan

David Lawrence, Washington news correspondent, yesterday denied challenging the "nonpartisan" policies of the Fairfax County League of Women Voters.

Lawrence yesterday so interpreted a letter he wrote to Mrs. Edward Macy, league president.

As chairman of the executive committee of a 21-member commission studying possible county government reform, he merely relayed the questions of another commission member, Lawrence told The Washington Post.

They were honest questions, sought only information, and were not accusations, he said.

They asked, concerning the league's indorsement of a county manager form of government for Fairfax County:

"1. As I [the unnamed commission member] understand it, your organization is nonpartisan. Is it not your position, as such, to try to present the facts on both sides, rather than promote one side over the other?

"2. Who has paid for the literature and other expenses in your campaign for this change?"

Mrs. Macy replied that the league's nonpartisan label stems from its refusal to consider party lines in enrolling members, who are drawn both from Democrat and Republican ranks.

In reply to the second question, she said the financial support of the league comes from "interested citizens." Many "volunteers," she said, had worked for the county, manager form of government, and thereby kept the expenses down.

In showing the letter to a reporter, she declared that the questions "seem intended to cast doubt on the true nonpartisan character of the league . . . and to imply that the League has some secret, perhaps disreputable source of funds."

Such was not the intention, Lawrence said yesterday. The questions, he explained, were two that he received during a public hearing which went unanswered for lack of time. They were only two of a number of written questions asked at the meeting. Lawrence said. He merely forwarded them to Mrs. Macy so the answers could be put on record, he said.

Lane Demands Foes Tell How To Cut Budget

By The Associated Press

Governor Lane said yesterday his opponents for renomination "tell the people that they will do everything I have done and do it for less money."

But they don't say how they're going to do it, Lane declared in a statement from his campaign headquarters.

More than 41 percent of the State budget — $59,500,000 — is money which the State turns back to Baltimore City, the counties and the incorporated towns, Lane repeated.

"Now, I ask the point-blank question," he said, "should we cut that down?"

Letters Create Furore

Lane's remarks were taken to be leveled principally at George P. Mahoney, his chief opponent for the Democratic nomination for Governor in the September 18 primaries.

Repercussions were still being heard Friday from the disclosure that 23,000 boost-Lane letters had been sent to University of Maryland alumni through the university's mailing facilities. Expenses were paid by the Lane campaign fund.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president, when asked about the procedure, said the university's mailing facilities would be available to any candidate.

As of yesterday, however, no one had taken him up on the offer. Some of Lane's opponents had bitter comments.

Byrd Threatened With Writ

Mahoney's campaign manager, Hugo R. Hoffman, said:

"We thank Dr. Byrd for his offer, but the Mahoney-for-Governor campaign is being run on a private enterprise basis."

A sharper comment came from Hyman A. Pressman, one of Mahoney's legal advisers. He wired Dr. Byrd:

"Either you do not appreciate the evil of paying taxpayers' money for political purposes or you have no respect for propriety or public opinion. I demand that you promise immediately to discontinue using university facilities for the Democratic gubernatorial I shall feel compelled to file suit to enjoin you."

Herbert William Larabee of Glen Burnie, another candidate for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, attacked Lane for permitting the university "to be used for political purposes."

New Law to Hike Welfare Board's Aid to Families

Until Tuesday

Lone Protest Delays Smith Judgeship

Senate District Committee approval of Emory B. Smith's nomination to Municipal Court appeared likely last night despite a sharp protest that deferred the committee's decision until next Tuesday.

Smith, Washington Negro attorney, was nominated by President Truman to fill the last of three new judgeships created last year by Congress for Municipal Court. District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said the committee has agreed to vote on the nomination at 3 p. m. Tuesday. He said the delay was asked by some members to let them make further inquiry into questions raised by the protest.

Thirty-Five Approve

Thirty-five persons at yesterday's hearing on Smith registered approval by a standing vote. They did not testify. Committee Counsel Gerhard P. van Arkel turned over to the committee a long list of indorsements from prominent persons in the legal and other professions.

The protest came from Mrs. Grace Tillman, grey-haired Negro widow, who appeared with counsel, Miss Naomi Wheeler.

Senators took turns questioning Mrs. Tillman and her lawyer to establish the complex details of a divorce action and later litigation in which Smith represented Mrs. Tillman's late husband, Andrew Tillman, and a person identified by Smith as Tillman's alleged common-law wife, Marie Francis Tillman.

Pension Not Paid

Key to Mrs. Tillman's protest was Smith's effort to have Marie Francis declared Tillman's widow. Smith said that effort failed and the pension paid for a time to Marie Francis was ended. Mrs. Tillman said she has yet to get the pension.

Complicating the story was testimony about a divorce suit which Tillman won against Mrs. Tillman, but in the name of his deceased first wife, Cora Tillman, and an effort by Smith after Tillman's death to have the divorce action apply to Grace Tillman.

Chairman Neely, after perusing a decision by the United States Court of Appeals in favor of Mrs. Tillman, said its only criticism was aimed at the lower court, and not at Attorney Smith.

Smith said he was the target of two suits by Mrs. Tillman this year. Both were dismissed.

Exempt From Taxes

In other actions, the Senate District Committee approved and forwarded to the Senate bills to (1) exempt the YMCA from District property taxes; (2) authorize an exchange of lands here between the park system and the New Temple Committee, Inc.; (3) require District barbers to post their prices conspicuously, and (4) permit flight experience to be given District high school students who take the ground course now given in aviation subjects. The committee turned down a bill to buy a tract of land at 18th, Taylor and S. Dakota ave. ne. for a park.

Meanwhile, the House District Committee approved two bills, (1) to authorize the New Temple Committee land exchange, and (2) to end the practice of charging weekends and holidays and authorized vacation periods against sick leave allowances, and reimburse teachers for any expense of hiring substitutes during the period July 1, 1949, through October 12, 1949.

Social Security Legislation Makes Possible Average Increase of $16.50

Public Welfare Board officials yesterday estimated the new social security legislation is going to save them 7 percent in payments in two categories and permit them to increase family payments by an average of $16.50 per month.

The board, which met yesterday in regular session, stated that the new law, HR 6000, will cut District payments by 4 percent, and will reduce aid to dependent children payments by 3 percent. The difference will be made up by Federal contributions.

Welfare officials figured an average $16.50 monthly increase for a family with four children. The average payment now is $74 per month.

Those Over 18 Eligible

In addition, the District will be able to hike its payments to permanent and totally disabled recipients of public welfare funds. Under the new law, anyone over 18 in this category will be eligible for Federal payments. Under present law the District receives no Federal reimbursement unless the person is over 65 years old or totally blind.

There are now 1277 general disability cases on public welfare rolls. Four hundred and forty-three have been classified as totally and permanently disabled, and 433 are being studied to determine whether their disability is permanent.

At yesterday's board meeting members heard a report on an investigation of complaints that welfare checks are being cashed in liquor stores.

Handy Location

The investigation showed that of 53 persons checked, 43 are 65 years of age or older. They said they used liquor stores because they were located near their homes. The same number of persons reported they did not drink. Two admitted they drink, and three others are known to be drinkers.

The board noted a 13.7 percent increase in the number of cases receiving assistance last month as compared with July, 1949.

Your Baby

Saying 'No' a Part of Young Child's Growth

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THERE is something so ridiculously perverse about the 2 to 3-year-old that to an outsider it is enchanting.

Recently a young miss of this age came into a beauty parlor with her mother. She sat on mother's lap primly. Then the boxes and bottles in the case beside her attracted her eye. Her mother took one of the rouge boxes on display and put it into her hands. She looked and then she wished to open it. "I'll open it for you," said her mother, but this didn't suit her. "I wanta, I wanta," she cried, tears close to her voice. All the time she kept looking at me to see how I was reacting to her.

Soon she wanted to sit beside her mother on the chair. So she climbed in and promptly put her feet on the light upholstery.

"You don't put your feet on the cushions," said her mother.

In answer she pulled up her feet and put them all the more firmly right on the cushions, all with a skittering glance at me which said, "How'm I doing?"

Her mother lifted her into her lap so that her feet stuck out away from the upholstery. With this she seemed perfectly satisfied.

It is true most of these little die-hards don't care too much about what they are doing. They are contrary and negativistic because they love being victorious over their domineering parents. The mother says no, the child says yes, and either way may be of little consequence to the child. It isn't what she is doing—like putting feet on cushions—that is so important, it is just the fun of getting the best of that controlling adult.

If this weren't natural behavior it wouldn't appear so consistently at this age. It is part of the growing up process. Before a child can conform she has to rebel. Eventually a child discovers that conformity has its advantages. She gets something she wants by giving up something else.

Children never learn this unless parents themselves are flexible. The parent who goes to the mat about each and every negativistic act just crystallizes the child's negativism. But, if the mother, without words or recrimination, changes the whole situation—as she did when she lifted the child into her lap—the opposition vanishes, the child conforms and all is serene.

Buffet Supper Idea

Gelatin Dishes Air Condition The Hostess on Torrid Days

By Harriet Jean Anderson

WE DON'T need to extoll the virtues of gel cookery for the summertime hostess—they are well known today. With gelatin, soups, salads, main course dishes and desserts can be prepared in the cool of the morning, refrigerated until serving time.

A twin-salad we offer here as a buffet supper idea, made from a basic mixture that can be prepared to serve 6 or 12 guests.

MOLDED SHRIMP, BUFFET STYLE

½ cup cold water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon Tabasco
¾ cup salad dressing
1½ teaspoons grated onion
½ cup finely diced celery
¼ cup diced green pepper
¼ cup chopped pimiento
2 2 cups shrimp, cooked and chopped

Let gelatin stand in cold water 5 minutes. Place over boiling water and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add lemon juice, salt, Worcestershire sauce and Tabasco. Cool. Add salad dressing; mix in remaining ingredients. Turn into large or individual molds; chill until firm. Yield; 6 portions.

EGG SALAD

Follow the recipe for the shrimp salad, increasing salt to 1 teaspoon and substitute 4 hardcooked eggs, chopped, for the shrimp. Note: For 12 portions from either recipe, double all ingredients and turn into 1½ quart mold.

CHICKEN SUPREME

1 chicken (3 lbs.) cut up
1½ quarts boiling water
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
6 stuffed olives, sliced
1 cup blanched almonds, split
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon minced parsley
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook chicken in water until tender (2-3 hours); add salt and pepper. Remove chicken from broth and boil down the stock to 2 cups; strain. Soften gelatin in cold water 5 minutes; add hot stock, stirring until dissolved, and cool. Remove chicken from bones and cube. Remove egg yolks and force through sieve; season with salt and pepper.

Blend whipped cream into egg mixture. Pour ½ cup gelatin mixture in chilled 9x4x3-inch loaf pan. Arrange egg white slices in bottom of pan and place olives and almonds, flat side down, alternately in spaces. Sprinkle chicken, lemon rind and parsley over bottom layer. Add egg yolk mixture to remaining gelatin and pour over chicken. Chill until firm. Unmold; serve. Yield: 8 portions.

Don't 'Diet'—Just Change Food Habits

By Ida Jean Kain

THE only trouble with diet is . . . you love to eat. As one overweight explains, as soon as she starts to think about dieting, her mind dwells on all the foods she can't have. And since there is really nothing in the food line that she doesn't enjoy, it's very difficult to give up anything. All of which makes diet just twice as hard for her as anyone else. Try as she will, she can never stay with it over three days.

That's why many of you have a hard time dieting—you go about it the hard way. With a do-or-die mindset, you periodically tackle a strict diet . . . manage to lose 3 pounds through grim determination . . . and shortly gain back 3½ pounds.

There's only one solution. Stop going on diets. Simply change your food habits and eat for normal weight. Change your psychology, too, and instead of dwelling on all the foods you can't have, think of all the good foods you can eat and lose a pound or two a week.

And hold the thought of how wonderful you'll look with 10 or 20 pounds gone for good. Ah, you can hardly wait . . .

Make it easy for yourself. Usually the family has a lot of foods the reducer can't eat. Well, turn the tables and have special foods the others don't have. When their dessert is something like blueberry pie, have a big, juicy piece of honeydew melon in front of your plate. And at the side of the plate have a few of those luscious, fresh, black cherries. M-M-M. . . . That way the pie won't tempt you. And fix yourself an especially good salad—ripe tomato slices, cucumber, crisp lettuce and watercress, and a stalk or two of celery stuffed with cottage cheese. Why, the family will soon want to eat your diet!

You are sure to be happy, though slighting calories, if you plan meals that furnish good nutrition. The excess pounds you're going to clip off represent stored fuel. And while you draw on them for part of your energy needs, you must eat your full share of the foods that furnish the essential nutrients. Protein, minerals and vitamins are not stored up with excess pounds, so they must be furnished daily, in normal amounts.

In the long run, rigid diet is not the best way to slim down, anyway. It's following a good food pattern and eating for healthy normal weight that does it. And once you get the knack of eating that way, you'll enjoy it.

Jean L. Douglas Becomes Bride

By Elizabeth Maguire

A SMALL wedding yesterday was also one of the season's prettiest. Miss Jean Lucia Douglas and Frank P. Lockhart, jr., of the State Department, were married at noon in St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette Square. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn officiated. A reception followed at the Statler Hotel.

Ivory gladioli and candles decorated the altar. The bride's gown of chambray linen was cut in quaint fashion with fitted jacket and elbow length sleeves, and the skirt had wide bands of lace inserts. She wore a wreath of stephanotis in her hair and her bouquet was of ivy and stephanotis. The matron of honor, Mrs. Gibbs Baker, jr., was in lime chiffon and her flowers were yellow and red zinnias.

Ambassador and Mrs. Johnson entertained Thursday evening at a dinner at their home for the members of the wedding party. After the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs Baker, jr., took all the guests to the Chevy Chase Club for dancing.

The bride is the daughter of Richard Douglas and the late Mrs. Douglas of Washington and Great Neck, Long Island.

The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Lockhart of Washington and Texas.

Sunday School Plan Is Adapted to Ages

A group of parents at Christ Episcopal Church, 3100 O st. nw., thought so four years ago.

Specially, they said programs generally don't pay attention to what a child can learn at a certain age, and how to make the lesson stick.

The parents decided to do something about adapting lessons to each child in the class.

Their approach was scientific. They called upon the aid of a psychologist, Dr. Ernest M. Ligon of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., who was experimenting on a program of character education.

Dr. Ligon—a theologian turned psychology professor — believed "attitudes" to be more important than specific behavior patterns in shaping character. He was developing a Sunday School program for children, 2 to 17, stressing this.

Christ Church entered Dr. Ligon's character research program in 1947. The parents found the course divided into 3 basic subjects for each 36 weeks. These subjects, pitched to eight age groups, are repeated with variation and amplification every two years.

The six broad titles are social adjustment, adjustment to the universe, vocational adjustment, adjustment to authority, various sacrifice, and vision.

Active in the program is the Rev. Arthur H. Underwood, assistant minister of Christ Church and head of its school department.

"An attitude," Mr. Underwood said, "for example, might be that the road of authority is imposed for your own good, even if it is occasionally abused.

"Unless you accept the fact you are not ultimately your own master, you cannot come to terms with God."

Mr. Underwood has attended Dr. Ligon's workshop at Union.

Mr. Underwood gave an example:

"More than anything," he said, "we would like our high school young people to come to the end of their high school careers in the Character Research Program, not only having chosen their vocation; but with a tremendous vision for that vocation.

"How do we do it? Here's one way.

"We begin much earlier than the high shool age. In the nursery (2-3 years) we lay the foundation by increasing the child's feelings of sympathy with others. This is done by playing imaginative roles, such as mailman, milkman and other helpers in the realm of his experience.

"In the kindergarten (4-5) we help the child sense the importance of what his parents do when they act as helpers to people he knows in the community.

"In the primary (6-7) this attitude of one's importance in helping others includes the things that his teacher does as well as the things his parents do.

"We challenge the secondary (8-9) child to overcome handicaps in order to achieve some things which are hard to do but possible for him to accomplish. The junior (10-11) child needs to have opportunities and experiences which will broaden his outlook. He should explore parts of the community he knows very little about in order to get a more realistic understanding of some of the problems.

"Our young folk in the Senior 1 group (14-15) should have experiences which will point up for them the social challenge in one's work. The concept of the will of God in a man's life work needs to become realistic for our high school youth.

"Finally, we want our young folk to realize the importance of a sense of team work with God in all of one's life including his vocation."

The results from Christ Church, along with 60 other congregations over the United States, are reviewed and the suggestions incorporated in next year's lessons.

On Sunday, a group of teachers and executives of the church will attend a teacher-training workshop for the project.

They will learn, among other things, the role and technique of the "observer," the adult who is assigned to each class to see how the individual children are understanding the point of the lesson. Also, how parents can continue the lesson through the week. The workshop will be in charge of William J. Gold, an associate of Dr. Ligon's.

On the basis of the three-year trail, Dr. Underwood said the parents considered the program "an unqualified success."

Christian Love Held Answer To Communism

Massanetta Springs, Va., Aug. 25 (AP).—The Christian community of love is a positive answer to the Communist challenge, Dr. David H. Read, of Edinburgh, Scotland, told an audience of more than 900 gathered here for the annual Bible conference.

Dr. Read spoke on "The Marks of the Church." He named unity as the first mark, and added that the church of the New Testament was not a kind of religious club, but a divine community commissioned to do the work of the Lord.

"The division of the church today is not only the cause of ineffectiveness, but a sin against the design of God," he said. "One of the happiest of recent signs is the new understanding of the oneness of the church and the coming together in the economical movement."

Dr. Read named vitality as the second mark of the church, sincerity third, humility fourth, and "community" fifth.

This community, he said, is not merely a social product, but a gift of God where he is truly sought.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, president of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, N. J., addressed a special session of 200 ministers this morning. He will speak again Saturday and Sunday.

The reading will begin at 2 a. m., and is expected to conclude at 8 p. m. The church will be open to the public throughout the reading.

Synagogue Organized for High Holidays

A Young People's Synagogue has been organized for newcomers to the Washington area, particularly for the Jewish high holidays next month.

Founding fathers are members of the Bachelor's Club of Independence Lodge of B'nai B'rith. H. J. Shechtel, chairman of the synagogue committee, commented: "We realized the need to absorb religiously, culturally and socially the many transient young Jewish men and women in the community, as well as those newcomers who haven't as yet become settled."

Nearly 20 other Jewish young adult groups have joined in the project and are lending support, he said.

The synagogue's rabbi is Dr. Hymen Ezra Cohen, president of the Washington Rabbinical Council; its cantor Ben Wostein who has been featured in Washington synagogue choirs for 15 years.

Rosh Hashonoh and Yom Kippur services will be held in the main dining room of Hotel 2400. Shechtel said the services will be conducted "in such a way as to have meaning for young people. Much of the service will be in English, rather than the traditional Hebrew, with a maximum participation by the congregation."

Tickets for these services can be obtained at Hotel 2400 16th st. nw.; the Crown Restaurant, 517 13th st. nw., and the Washington Jewish Bookstore, 730 Kennedy st. nw.

Reds Attack Truman As Pseudo-Christian

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Moscow radio today reported that Russian Baptist leaders, in a protest to the United Nations Security Council over American action in Korea, had labelled President Truman a "pseudo-Christian."

The Baptists called for support of Russia's proposal to the Council that foreign troops be recalled from Korea. Two similar appeals, also heard over Moscow radio, were made by the Albanian government and the head of the Armenian church.

The Baptists' message, signed by the chairman and general secretary of the All Union Council of Evangelical Christian Baptists of the USSS, declared:

"Our indignation at American hostilities against the Korean people is increased by the realization that these actions are being committed on orders of a representative of the American Baptist Church.

"The hetacombs of human lives destroyed by American arms will be on the conscience of this pseudo-Christian."

The Armenian church protest demanded "that American troops who, under the flag of the United Nations, are serving a policy of world domination of the United States be withdrawn from Korea immediately."

I am telling you about the most beautiful setting for a home in this part of the United States.

This setting for this home is located on River rd., right across from the entrance to the Congressional Club. I advertised this beautiful setting for a home but nobody bought it so I decided to build my own home on it and it is now about completed. Ride out on River rd. and just view this house as I do every day and you will get a thrill out of it like I do. It is the next ride I am going to take when I am through putting this ad in over the telephone in The Post. You know why this setting for this home is so beautiful? It is very easy to understand. God Almighty made this beautiful setting for a home. As soon as the home is completed I will develop a beautiful lawn. There are people riding up on this hill every day to talk to my builder, Mr. Ed Eisler, who want to buy this home but they can't have it, but you can build yourself a home on the adjoining hills that I have. I will sell you this other ground in large quantities at what it cost me 22 years ago, plus interest and taxes to date which is approximately $6500 an acre. I will not sell small parcels. I want to sell this as an entirety. It is clear of debt and I can give you generous terms. If you want to discuss this matter further with me you can reach me at my home, WO. 0933, Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers attention.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Dear Boss:

I guess I'm like the proud father who whips out his daughter's baby pictures and says: "It ain't just that she's my kid, you understand, but let me tell you what a clever thing she said at breakfast this morning." It ain't just that it's my home town, you understand, but this Bill Gold is on vacation. His column today takes the form of a letter to his managing editor.

Cincinnati is a mighty nice place in which to live.

It has its drawbacks, to be sure, and in some respects Washington has it backed right off the map. After all, what city can compete with our own parks, public buildings, memorials and imposing avenues and boulevards—to say nothing of the White House and Capitol?

On the other hand, Cincinnati offers one thing I missed when I came to Washington—a feeling of belonging to the community and participating in its affairs.

When I was a boy, Cincinnati was run by a political boss. The city government was corrupt, the streets were full of holes, and taxes were high.

A nonpartisan reform ticket swept the boodlers out of office, installed a city manager, and in a few short years earned Cincinnati the distinction of being called "the best governed" in the Nation.

That's what I mean when I speak of a sense of pride in "belonging." We'd no more think of passing up our chance to vote than we would pass up Opening Day at Redland Field (later Crosley Field). We voters were the bosses; our officials took orders instead of arbitrarily giving orders.

Though Cincinnati is a Republican stronghold in State and national politics, its nonpartisan Charter Party still runs the city, and the likes of Charlie Taft (the Senator's brother) is a Charter councilman.

It all adds up to the kind of city administration in which an irate citizen can take his squawk to the council, or even pound on the City Manager's desk if he has a mind to. And, aside from traffic control and the prevalence of handbooks, the voters have little to complain about.

Here's an example: Tucked away in a small item on the financial page of the Enquirer one day last week was the announcement that streetcar fares will go up one-half cent.

The reason is that the city some time back worked out a "fare control fund" for the Street Railway Co. When the company's "allowable return" on investment falls below what was agreed to be a reasonable percentage, fares are automatically adjusted without a lot of argument and acrimony.

Streetcars and buses carry advertising signs on their sides as well as in the usual spot up front, and the company thereby realizes additional revenue. In recent years many of the motor bus lines have been changed to trackless electric trolleys, with the wires strung in such a manner that the buses can make their usual stops at the curb. The electrics are apparently more efficient and economical to operate.

The traffic situation, on the other hand, could stand improvement. But what city's handling of traffic couldn't?

In one respect, the Queen City shows good sense. Its traffic lights, like ours, are on street corners rather than in the center of the street; but they're many feet higher, and can be plainly seen over the tops of buses.

The city has torn down houses in many areas recently, and built new streets designed to speed the flow of motor traffic.

But despite the absence of streetcars on these thoroughfares, speed limits are still held to 25, and the lights are so badly synchronized that three greens in a row is probably the all-time record.

Downtown, of course, Cincinnati's narrow streets and short blocks present a special problem. The city's solution is a system of alternate reds and greens, plus rapid changes. The green stays on for slightly more than 15 seconds, which moves you through the congested area at an orderly crawl.

One-way streets help, but not too much. Traffic cops are everywhere, and they take no sass. When the sign reads "No Parking" and the policeman says "Okay, bud, get it out of there," he means toot sweet or shell out six bucks. Overtime parking and violations on nonarterial streets are currently quoted at half price, and cost only $3.

Another good idea we might borrow from Cincinnati is the practice of having policemen control individual traffic lights when the occasion warrants.

Instead of standing in the intersection and waving at motorists in a futile effort to speed things up, Cincinnati cops have a special key which takes the light at any intersection out of the city-wide synchronization plan and puts it under manual control.

It works wonders when special occasions bring an extraordinary flow of traffic—usually from one direction.

You might think that this system would foul up the city-wide plan, and accomplish nothing more than the creation of a bottleneck at the next intersection. But it doesn't work out that way, and the assignment of a few traffic officers to key corners is extremely effective. Here at least. (I put that in so that George Keneipp won't wring my neck when I get home).

Well, so much for Cincinnati's vital statistics. Tonight we're going nightclubbing; tomorrow I'll have a report on the gambling situation. Bill.

P. S. Now don't start worrying that by tomorrow you'll get a telegram reading "It's a fascinating game, send more money." Bernice says if I get within 10 feet of a crap table she'll break every bone in my head.

USSR Ends Korean Weather News

(Drew Pearson will be back from his vacation and writing the Washington Merry-Go-Round on Monday.)

By Fred Blumenthal

The Russians abruptly stopped broadcasting weather information this week from their weather stations north of Korea. This apparently was done to hinder U. S. airmen, who had been using the Soviet weather broadcasts to help plan their raids. These Soviet stations are part of an international network which exchanges weather information in peacetime. However, the Russians apparently decided to help the North Koreans and put the weather stations under a wartime blackout.

Rep. Rogers

Democrats Tangle

Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas of Illinois, tangled hotly on the "adjournment" question at the big four leaders' meeting with President Truman this week.

Rayburn insisted that Congress should adjourn "sine die" when all emergency bills have been passed early next month. This would mean a complete shutdown until next January 3, barring a recall by the President.

"It would be better for the country if we adjourned and let things settle down," argued the Speaker. "Also, the rest of the world would get the impression that we aren't fearful of a third world war."

However, Lucas strongly urged that Congress remain formally in session, but institute "three-day recesses" to give members of both houses time to campaign.

"We are in an emergency and the country expects Congress to remain on the job," declared the Senate leader. "The recess plan would keep us on a standby basis."

"The House won't agree to anything but a sine die adjournment," Rayburn firmly insisted. The Speaker didn't have to add that the reason his colleagues are itching to adjourn is because all House members have re-election campaigns, as compared with only a third of the Senate.

"This is something you will have to decide yourselves," the President said, adding that he could still recall Congress "within 24 hours" whether it adjourned sine die or invoked three-day recesses.

Washington Pipeline

President Truman will soon put all Pacific Coast ports under wartime security. His authority is contained in the new law pushed through Congress by Senator Magnuson of Washington . . . The Senate Agriculture Committee is investigating a sub rosa oil deal, involving employes of the Government-owned Farm Mortgage Corporation. A group of employes heard about oil on Federal land, and quietly bought up the mineral rights from their own agency . . . In spite of the lessons of the Berlin airlift, the Air Force was caught short of transport planes at the Korean outbreak. One reason was the opposition of the big airlines and the Civil Aeronautics Board. Exactly one month before the Korean invasion, the CAB told Congress that "the board believes the (bill) relating to the establishment of a Government pool of cargo aircraft is unnecessary and undesirable at the present time" . . . The FBI has been tipped off that a meeting of mob leaders is scheduled in Cleveland next week . . . The price of crude rubber has jumped 300 percent since the Korean war . . . D. Worth Clark, who nosed out Senator Glen Taylor for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Idaho, is almost sure to be knocked off by the Republicans. They have a recording of his last radio speech before the primary. He was supposed to speak 15 minutes, but lasted only 4. The remaining time had to be filled in with music . . . Prompt action by the Philippine government in sending troops into Korea has made a big hit with key Washington officials. Best U. S. investment in the Far East today would be broad-gauged economic aid to the Philippine people.

Splitting Hairs

Congressman Jack Anderson's bald head got involved the other day in a House hearing over whether free hospital care should be provided for servicemen's dependents.

Speaking for the American Medical Association, Dr. Walter Martin of Norfolk, Va., contended that such a medical aid program would be "discriminatory" against dependents who couldn't afford to travel long distances to Government hospitals.

"That argument doesn't stand up," disagreed Anderson, a California Republican. "I pay the same taxes as a person who lives next door to a fire house, but he gets better protection."

Legless Veterans

Several years back Congress appropriated funds to purchase automobiles for legless veterans, who find the public transportation extremely difficult. Recently, however, the money ran out, and no provision has been made to buy automobiles for 150 remaining applicants approved by the Veterans' Administration.

To make matters worse, no new bill has been passed by either the House or Senate to provide for an anticipated 500 service men and women who will be eligible for this assistance in the coming year. Ironically, these are the most seriously wounded cases, some of whom have spent six or seven years in veterans' hospitals.

Kindly Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts has been demanding action in the House; so has Florida's Senator Claude Pepper in the Senate. But congressional leaders are too busy with other things to rectify the tragic oversight.

"This is one of the things that must be passed before any congressional recess," Mrs. Rogers insists. "It's a debt that the United States Government owes the boys. It will be a rank injustice if action is not taken."
